NAZIS CLAIM 270,000 REDS ANNIHILATED

Assert Nine Soviet Divisions Slaughtered In Battle Near Leningrad.

CAPTURE BRIDGEHEADS

Moscow Reports Sinking Ten German Ships Carrying Troops To Estonia.

(By Associated Press)

Adolf Hitler's high command reported today the annihilation of nine Soviet divisions and the crushing of nine other divisions "with the bloodiest losses"—a grand total of about 270,000 men—in fighting south of Lake Ilmen on the Leningrad front.

In a special bulletin, the fuehrer's field headquarters declared that strong forces of the 11th, 27th and 34th Russian armies had been "decisively defeated," with the capture of 53,000 Red army prisoners, 320 tanks and 625 pieces of artillery.

German losses, as usual, were not disclosed.

The Nazi bulletin said the vast slaughter occurred "during the past weeks" and indicated a smashing blow to Leningrad's defense army of 1,000,000 men.

Simultaneously, the Soviet army newspaper Red Star reported that a gigantic night battle of heavy tanks for "an important point on the approaches to Leningrad" ended in a complete rout of the Germans, who left hundreds dead on the field.

Nazi military dispatches, picturing Leningrad as doomed, said the great network of steel and concrete fortifications ringing the old czarist capital was crumbling under blows of the most destructive weapons in the German arsenal.

More than 200 Soviet bunkers and pillboxes in the Leningrad defense zone were reported smashed or captured, and German troops at some points were reported only 15 miles from the heart of the city.

On the southern front, the Nazi high command asserted that German troops after several days' fighting had captured a series of

Firemen, Council Clash Tomorrow On Ball Diamond

Most sport fans may be looking forward to the playing of the 1941 World Series but even this sport classic pales in comparison with another to be held in Mansfield tomorrow.

Sporting the wierdest conglomeration of baseball styles ever collecting on one diamond, members of city council and the police and fire departments will fight for the championship of the Municipal building at the annual outing of city employes tomorrow afternoon at North Lake park.

Already alibis have begun floating through the building's corridors. The firemen complain that the wrong shift will be working tomorrow and that most of the "stars" will be out of action.

Council, on the other hand, is worried about the condition of its "stellar" first baseman, C. N. Shultz, who batted in the winning run for them last year.

Ralph Hughes, municipal court clerk, is general chairman of the outing. Following the baseball game and a program of other athletics, refreshments will be served around 6 p. m.

Hughes expects about 200 employes will attend the affair. The municipal building will be closed for the afternoon.

More important than ever today is the U. S. Navy's

Industries of District 'Shop' In City Today for Defense Jobs

Area Arms Jobs Near 30 Million

Contract Awards In District Hit $22,000,000

A rapidly accelerating production of defense materials, ranging from rubber gloves to locomotives, is north central Ohio's answer to the government's challenge to industry for huge quantities of war supplies.

Noise from busy assembly lines and the constant whir of machinery can be heard night and day as workmen in the Mansfield area labor round the clock to turn out defense products.

Engaged in the task are some 11 factories, all within a 30-mile radius of Mansfield. Combined total of government contracts held by these plants is estimated at well over $22,000,000.

This figure represents orders on which approximately 6,000 men and women are employed.

Meanwhile, representatives from industries in the 30-mile district are in Mansfield today attending the defense clinic which is expected to develop additional defense orders for their companies.

In addition to this big expenditure of United States funds in the heart of Ohio, nearby Mt. Vernon has eight plants, with more than 3,000 persons working on $16,000,000 worth of government orders.

The march of men back to machines has boosted employment in this area to a record high with the result that skilled labor is at a premium. Defense training classes, to turn out experienced workers, have been conducted to alleviate the situation.

Of the seven cities in the immediate vicinity of Mansfield, Galion is setting the pace in the defense effort.

There seven factories are working on an estimated $7,000,000 worth of government orders.

Operations at all these plants are at least 50 per cent on defense supplies, company spokesmen said. Some firms are working almost entirely on government contracts with as high as 90 per cent of their

Mansfield Works On $6,000,000 In U. S. Orders

While Mansfield and other central Ohio manufacturers considered making bids for a share of federal contracts for defense from officials of 28 of the nation's largest industries attending a defense clinic in the city today, a Chamber of Commerce survey revealed that Mansfield plants already hold approximately $6,000,000 in defense orders.

More than double the city's total a month ago, the increase was made through a $3,173,975 order for the Mansfield plant of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company on Sept. 9 and additional contracts to smaller industries.

Westinghouse will require some 700 men to turn out 10,000 sets of binoculars monthly. The work will be done in the new East Fourth street warehouse.

Many of the companies in the city holding contracts work on a progressive basis which adds to their orders as they complete specified work units. They have picked up a total of about $400,000 in the past month.

The Chamber of Commerce announced that the survey shows 18 Mansfield companies employing approximately 1,700 men on defense work alone. Westinghouse's addition of 700 for work on the binoc-

Employes Start Back To Jobs After Plant Accepts U. S. Settlement Program.

BULLETIN

Richard Neibur, field organizer for the UERMW said today he had been informed by the National Labor Relations board members that a representative of the board will meet with representatives of the union and the Ohio Brass company Friday at 10 a. m. in the common pleas court room here, regarding the union's request for certification as sole bargaining agent for the Mansfield plant.

A three-and-a-half-month-old strike at the Barberton insulator plant of the Ohio Brass company ended today when members of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers union (CIO) returned to work.

Company spokesmen in Mansfield said strikers were going to work as fast as the company could take them back, but that it would take "a little time" to get production rolling again.

The return-to-work decision was made, union organizers said, "after the company accepted the National Defense Mediation Board's proposal for settlement."

Edwin Fout, president of the Akron CIO local, said the union accepted the mediation board proposal a month ago but that the company did not agree to it until yesterday. Negotiations in which the union is seeking a 10-cent an hour wage increase will be resumed in Washington Friday under

DETAIN SHIP

Japs Hold Up Departure From Shanghai of U. S. Freighter.

SHANGHAI —(INS)— Japanese authorities today held up the departure for Manila of the American merchant ship "Zoella Lykes."

The Japanese demanded that the freighter unload in Shanghai its cargo of barreled oil consigned to Manila.

The vessel had already unloaded flour and a small consignment of oil for the Standard Oil company of New York.

Agents of the American President lines were negotiating for the release of the ship.

Fremont Judge Elected Justice Of Ohio Court of Appeals.

COLUMBUS—(U.P.)—Judge Arthur W. Overmyer of Fremont, presiding judge of the sixth district state court of appeals, was elected unanimously today as chief justice of the Ohio court of appeals for 1942.

The election took place at the annual meeting of the appellate judges here.

Ohio Bell To Build $166,000 Long Distance Station Here

Due to the increased traffic on its long-distance lines in the Mansfield area because of increased business and industry, the Ohio Bell Telephone company announced today that it would construct a new $166,000 long distance and repeater station in this city.

The telephone concern awarded the contract today for the construction of a two-story and basement building at 131-137 West Second street to replace the present office located in the Bird building to the A. N. J. Construction company of Coshocton.

Construction work will start in about a week.

Telephone officials said that the program "is made necessary by the increasing amount of long distance telephone traffic being handled by the company due to the general increase in business and industry as a result of the national defense program."

The new structure will cost about $65,000 with the long distance and station repeater equipment bringing the total cost to $166,000. Construction materials will be steel and concrete with face brick and stone trim.

Buying A Defense Stamp

While Mansfield was a key point today in the effort of the government to spread defense contracts to small business, with business representatives of the area conferring with government officials and prime contractors, there was another phase of the nation's defense campaign—the sale of defense stamps. Mansfield retail stores, joining in the "Retailers for Defense" movement, set up special booths and counter arrangements for the sale of stamps. In the picture above, Mrs. Andrew Tomb, 326 North Townview circle, buys a stamp from Miss Lois Curry, at an attractively decorated counter in the J. C. Penney company store. (Story on Page 13.)

Relate Story of Defense Movement In City, Area

Special Advertising In Today's News-Journal Tells of Activities of Manufacturers to Help Uncle Sam.

As industrialists from a wide area in north central Ohio met in Mansfield today in a move to obtain defense contracts, special advertising in today's News-Journal tells of the efforts of manufacturers in Mansfield and other cities to help Uncle Sam in the defense movement.

Some of the firms represented in the advertisements already are handling defense contracts. Others are prepared to turn out goods for Uncle Sam, while the transportation companies are doing their part by hauling raw materials or the finished products for the government.

The public utilities, which are not equipped to handle government orders, carried out the defense theme in their advertising.

Mansfield firms represented in the advertisements are:

Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company, Empire Sheet and Tin Plate company, Hughes-Keenan company, Farm Tools, Inc., Martin Steel Products company, Ohio Brass company, Humphryes Manufacturing company, Dominion Electric company, Art Rattan company, Ohio Public Service company, Ohio Fuel Gas company, Ohio Shale Face Brick company, Mansfield Brass foundry, Hartman Electric company, Hoff Manufacturing company, Sun Glow Industries, Inc., Richland Shale Brick company, Mansfield Plating company, Perfect Rubber company, American Electrical Products company, Richland Auto Parts company, Hayes Freight lines, Mansfield Transfer and Storage company, Taylor Metal Products company, and All States Freight, Inc.

Other industrial plants in neighboring towns and cities included:

Cooper-Bessemer corporation, Mt. Vernon; Plymouth Locomotive works division of Fate-Root-Heath company, Plymouth; Ohio Pad company, Galion; Lamb Glass company, Mt. Vernon; Ohio Grease company, Loudonville; Ashland Malleable company, Ashland; Toycraft Rubber company, Ashland; Ryboli Heater company, Ashland; Pioneer Rubber company, Willard; Michigan Steel Tube Products company, Shelby; Shelby Cycle company, Shelby; Shelby Sales Book company, Shelby; Autocall company, Shelby; Flxible Body company, Loudonville, and the Burch corporation, Crestline.

HUNTER HURT

Injured Near Loudonville as Wife's Gun Discharges.

With the squirrel hunting season just one day old in the southern half of Ohio, four minor casualties were reported today including one eight miles southwest of Loudonville.

In the Loudonville accident, a gun carried by Mrs. E. J. Bissel, 25, of Wadsworth, accidently discharged, wounding her husband. Bissel was treated for buckshot wounds in the hands, legs and body.

In other Ohio accidents, Columbus Police Corporal Edgar N. Butler was wounded in the head by a stray bullet while on duty near the eastern city limits; F. K. Rutter, 32, of Zanesville was slightly hurt when a companion mistook Rutter's cap for a squirrel; and Robert Duncan of Cadiz was struck by 18 shotgun pellets from a gun fired by a friend.

The season opened yesterday only in the southern part of the state. Hunting in the northern sector, including Richland county and roughly a third of the 88 Ohio counties, does not begin until Sept. 22.

CARAVAN HERE FOR CLINIC ON U. S. MATERIALS

Scores of Industrialists In Six-County Section Arrive For Conferences.

SET UP DISPLAYS

Big Manufacturers Showing Products Needed To Carry on Defense Program.

Mansfield became defense-conscious today as scores of industrialists from six north central Ohio counties came here shopping for defense contracts.

Meeting with the contract seekers were more than 35 government officials and heads of large industries holding defense orders with an estimated value of $5,000,000,000. The session was due to open at 2 p. m.

The big industrialists are preparing to let sub-contracts for a part of the huge amount and it was these smaller contracts that the representatives of firms in this area sought in their across-the-table conferences at the Mansfield-Leland hotel.

The caravan of OPM officials, defense contractors, and army and navy men began arriving in the city shortly before noon from Columbus, the first stop in Ohio.

The Columbus defense clinic showed results before the session was two hours old, a Lancaster firm obtaining a contract for machine tool parts. Another working agreement was reached by Akron and Columbus firms.

Mansfield was placed second on the list of eight cities to be visited by the caravan because the OPM said it is one of five cities where "a critical situation exists." It was pointed out that Mansfield factories produce largely for a domestic consumer market and would be hard hit by the government order limiting the amount of

OFFICER HURT

Col. Wood King Injured During Louisiana War Maneuvers.

WITH THE SECOND ARMY IN LOUISIANA — (INS) — Col. Woods King, commanding officer of the 107th cavalry and widely known Cleveland, O., real estate operator, was in an army base hospital today after suffering serious injury during the army war maneuvers.

Col. King was hurt when a scout car in which he was riding was forced into a ditch by another army vehicle while operating in last night's blackout. He suffered possible fracture of one or more ribs and possible kidney abrasions.

Lieut. Col. Ralph King, brother of Col. King and executive officer of the 107th cavalry, succeeded to command of the unit.

Insurance Salesmen Walkout In Pittsburgh Labor Dispute.

PITTSBURGH —(INS)— Five of the Lincoln Republic Life Insurance company's six agents in Pittsburgh went on strike today —the first such walkout in this city's history.

William Kirschner, of the executive committee of CIO industrial insurance agents local 68, said the men are demanding a "living" wage, job security and union recognition. The company had no comment.

Nominates Lahm, Native Of Mansfield, As Major General

Brig. Gen. Frank P. Lahm, native Mansfielder who was the U. S. army's first airplane and balloon pilot, today had been nominated by President Roosevelt to be a major general.

Lahm, who gave a Memorial Day address in Mansfield two years ago when he returned here for a brief visit, is now an air officer of the First Army with headquarters at Governor's Island, N. Y.

He will be retired in November when he reaches the statutory age limit of 64, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Washington.

Lahm, whose interest in aviation came from his father, began his career in 1905 when he went to France to study aeronautics. In 1909 he was a passenger in the first plane used by the army for military purposes, and with Orville Wright when he made the first cross-country flight, a 10-mile trip

Acts On Order To Convoy War Aid to Iceland

Knox Edict and Biddle Ruling Ease Up British Navy Task; Path Cleared For Shipment of Materials To Parts of Empire.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Stripped for action, the United States Atlantic fleet took under the protection of its guns today all lease-lend cargoes in transit on the Atlantic between the North American continent and Iceland.

The widely accepted view in authoritative quarters here was that it meant the start of actual convoy duty by U. S. naval vessels along a 2,000-mile stretch of the North Atlantic.

Literally, the new naval policy as enunciated by Secretary Knox was to provide protection "as adequate as we can make it" in the designated area, with all fleet units under specific orders "to capture or destroy by every means at their disposal" every Axis raider encountered.

With the Atlantic fleet charged with the responsibility of safeguarding British and all other cargo vessels in the expanses west of Iceland, the Royal navy could concentrate its efforts on guaranteeing safe passage through the perilous 800-mile stretch between Iceland and the British Isles.

In a companion move to ease Britain's shipping burdens, American merchantmen were given explicit permission to carry arms and munitions to many parts of the vast British empire.

NAZIS INSIST ON BLOCKADE RIGHT

Say North Atlantic War Zone's Legally Valid In Comment on U. S. Navy Move.

(By International News Service)

BERLIN — German authorities today insisted on the legal validity of the Nazi blockade of north Atlantic waters despite Secretary of the Navy Knox's orders to the United States fleet to sink Axis submarines and surface raiders found between North America and Iceland.

The American government, responsible sources asserted, has not notified Berlin of its definition of so-called American defense waters. Nor has Berlin requested such a definition since it considers its blockade pronouncement "valid guidance."

The same quarters declared that today's high command communique, announcing a crushing victory over the Russians in the Leningrad area, was "the most suitable answer" to the mission of W. Averell Harriman, lend-lease expediter, to Moscow.

"Similar answers will follow and will give Harriman something to do," it was added.

Nazi circles limited their comment on Secretary Knox's speech in Milwaukee to branding him as "Roosevelt's trumpeter" assigned to the job of going farther than his chief. "His speech merely clarifies publicly what we have known production being turned out for Uncle Sam.

Here's the way the defense production figure looks in nearby north central Ohio cities:

Galion—Holding more contracts than any other city in the Mansfield area, Galion has an estimated $7,000,000 in government orders on its hands. This total is distributed among seven plants employing approximately 2,000 men and women.

Some of the items produced include telephone equipment for the navy; heavy road building equipment, and truck bodies for the army's mechanized legions.

Shelby—Three factories in Shelby are turning out defense supplies. Only one, however, has obtained a big contract. Combined total of these contracts is estimated at $4,000,000, and is furnishing employment for approximately 1,700 workmen.

Included in the list of products produced are anti-aircraft gun controls, airplane tubing, printed forms and bicycles.

Plymouth—While not engaged directly in the production of war supplies, a lone factory at Plymouth is building locomotives and heavy tractors to assist in the defense effort.

The company employing approximately 450 workmen, during the past 10 months turned out $2,000,000 worth of equipment. At the present time it has a backlog of about $700,000 in orders.

Loudonville—Meeting the nation's transportation needs in the movement of war supplies, a single factory at Loudonville is building buses and ambulances.

Employing 650 persons at three plants, the company last year did a business of $4,000,000. Officials of the firm say the company now has a backlog of $1,500,000 in orders.

Mt. Gilead—In Mt. Gilead, seat of Morrow county, a lone plant is working on an estimated $3,000,000 worth of equipment used in producing war materials. The company operates two plants and employs 500 workmen in the construction of hydraulic presses.

Willard—Another "one-factory" city—Willard—supplies the army and navy surgeons with rubber gloves.

The company has 275 employes only part of which are engaged in the production of government orders estimated less than $100,000 during the past year.

Ashland—Unequipped to handle any large contracts, three factories in Ashland are turning out automotive parts, printed forms and rubber goods for the government.

Less than 100 persons are engaged in the work which is estimated to total less than $100,000.

SEEK PRISONER

BUCYRUS—Determined to establish the guilt of persons who have poisoned a number of dogs in the south part of town recently, Dr. and Mrs. C. A. Lingenfelter Monday authorized a post-mortem of their five-month-old pet Irish setter, who died of poison Saturday.

The valuable dog was poisoned in its own dog house, the owners reported.

Treasury's Defense Stamps

Here are the treasury's new defense stamps that are now being offered in denominations ranging from 10c to $5, giving the little fellow an opportunity to help his country finance the huge defense expenditures and ward off inflationary prices. They are being sold in Mansfield retail stores beginning today as part of the "Retailers for Defense" program.

COUSIN LEWIS TELLS REPORTER ED ABOUT DAYS OF CIVIL WAR

By EDGAR E. EASTERLY.

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Then I asked him:

"Cousin Lewis, weren't you awfully scared when those confederate bullets were whistling over?"

And he countered:

"Well, my rebel cousin, what would you have been if you were just eight years old?"

I replied I would have been digging myself a hole in the ground.

And he said: "You can't dig very well with a fife or water bucket."

That's what Cousin Lewis Henry Easterly carried in the Civil war.

Anyway, upon meeting him for the first time I was proud to learn that he was perhaps the youngest "man" to enlist with the Union army; that he fought at Shiloh, and that, despite his 88 years, he had traveled here by himself from his ranch in Gunnison, Colo., to attend the 75th annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic.

Now commander of the Colorado-Wyoming department of the G. A. R., he is known as the "baby" of the national organization because he ran away from home at the age of eight to fight for the northern cause.

Cousin Lewis' home then was near Carbondale, Ill. Grandfather Casper Easterly, displeased by slavery in the south, had moved there from the banks of the Knolichucky river in Greene county, eastern Tennessee, whence came your correspondent.

Commander Easterly joined the Ninth Illinois infantry (the "Bloody Ninth," he called it) on Aug. 1, 1862, with his 18-year-old uncle, David Jones.

He participated in battles at Paducah, Ky., and Saratoga Springs, but it was at Shiloh "that we took our worst beating," and lost his uncle.

"I was carrying water to the wounded," he related, "and was looking for David. When I found him he had been shooting from behind a mound of earth. Just then the bugle sounded retreat, but he didn't retreat. He had been shot through the head."

Only 18 men in his company of 100 went home from Shiloh, he said.

ular order would bring this to 2,500.

The Chamber pointed out that hundreds of the 13,123 men and women at work in Mansfield industries today are working indirectly for the defense program. This employment figure compares with 9,552 in 1940 and only 8,994 in 1939.

The survey shows that Mansfield workmen are turning out all kinds of vitally important defense articles.

Listed among the articles are: Generators for navy yards, fuel tank parts for submarines, rubber tires for mechanized warfare, straps for guns and knapsacks, bomb control releases, first aid kits for soldiers' belts, metal kitchen equipment for use in the field, clay brick for defense housing, lighting cubicles and switchboard equipment for the navy, metal dump bodies for army trucks sheet, bar and ingot steel for dozens of defense uses.

Other articles made here for defense are: Electric switches, metal stampings and parts for navy and army planes, metal cribs for surplus commodities, steel abrasive, transportation seating, and machinery parts.

In National DEFENSE

One of the most important phases of our National Defense, is guarding the health of our men at work, our children at school, our women at home, our youth in training. The farmer plays a vital part. Evidence of the relationship of the well being of our people to the strength of the nation is seen clearly enough in intensive effort made through government cooperation in this emergency.

The American farmer breeds the cattle, raises the crops, and distributes the foods on which this whole program rests. Upon him we depend to fill the vast American cupboard.

MARTIN STEEL PRODUCTS are a definite aid to the farmer. Our part in this vast program is the manufacture and distribution of the necessary farm building . . . to provide an economical, protected means for every farmer to meet today's crop and livestock problems, in his untiring efforts to produce sufficient quantities in an efficient manner.

Striving to do the best possible job, the American Farmer and Martin Steel Products Company join hands with all fellow Americans, in building the bulwark of our defense.

Expect Contract To Alleviate Job Problem Anticipated Because Of Curb On Refrigerators.
A $3,173,975 order for binoculars for the United States army—Mansfield's largest defense order to date—was held today by Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company.
C. G. Hillier, in charge of defense products at the Mansfield plant, announced the order simultaneously with a statement from the war department in Washington which said the contract was designed "to take up the slack in employment caused by priority ratings forcing manufacturers of civilian commodities to curtail production."
Actual manufacture of binoculars was expected to be held up "several months," company officials said, pending the arrival and installation of necessary machine tool equipment.
"Much of this equipment has already been ordered, however," Hillier said, "and the government has given us good priority ratings on both machines and materials for the order."

MANSFIELD, OHIO, TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1941

That "New European Order" seems to be mostly starvation for those who accept it and death for the rest.

It now develops that "Ouachita" isn't one of those beleaguered Russian towns but the scene of war maneuvers in Arkansas.

The sinister attempts of movie makers to encourage patriotic Americanism is another of the things that Wheeler wants looked into—such things may offend Hitler.

Mansfield Welcomes Many Visitors

SOME of the indirect, as well as the direct, benefits of Mansfield's advantageous location, ready accessibility, civic activity and widespread reputation for hospitality, accrue this week in the thousands of visitors who will be brought to this city to attend business or fraternal gatherings, to participate in conferences or to visit Mansfield stores during Fall Opening week.

There is the important matter of co-operation with the government in the sale of defense stamps, with Mansfield merchants assuming a full share of responsibility for making it easy for everybody to purchase stamps which can later be converted into interest-bearing defense savings bonds. A Defense Stamp Rally is scheduled for this evening at Central park.

Further spread of defense contracts into this section of Ohio is foreseen as a result of the better understanding of actual needs that will follow today's meeting of heads of north-central Ohio industries with representatives of OPM, the state defense council and employment service.

Then there's the meeting of bankers of this north-central Ohio group, scheduled for tomorrow, and also opening tomorrow is the state convention of Moose lodges, to extend through four days, with a big parade Saturday evening to serve as the wind-up feature.

Not to be forgotten, as a valuable contribution to sanitation and health throughout Ohio, is the meeting Thursday and Friday at which sewage plant operators and engineers will be here to discuss practices and problems in connection with their work, including inspection of Mansfield's modern sewage disposal plant.

And the first high school football game of the season will be played at Stadium Field Friday evening. Top-notch attractions will be featured at the motion picture theaters, including the showing of "Mansfield In Reelife."

Surely it must be said that the fall season is getting off to a good start in Mansfield!

Isolationists Attack Movies

THAT isolationist-inspired "investigation" of the movies, now being carried on by Senator Wheeler's sub-committee in Washington, is likely to attract far more favorable public attention to some of the so-called "propaganda" films than they would have otherwise attained.

Motion picture producers, it would appear, have been too ardent in their presentation of patriotic Americanism to suit the Wheeler-Nye-Clark ideas of "fairness" toward Naziism, Communism, Fascism, or any of the related alien isms, and a small hand-picked isolationist group of senators is now engaged in making an investigation on their own hook, ostensibly to learn whether there is justification for an actual senate investigation.

More obvious real intent of this Wheeler, et al. committee is to smear motion picture producers under rules of procedure which are entirely arbitrary and one-sided, in that they permit no defense or cross examination of persons called to testify.

It is claimed by this committee that "partiality" is shown in certain films, touching on the war theme, that have been shown to American audiences, which led Wendell Willkie, counsel for the film interests, to inquire at a recent session, "Does that mean they should be required to make pro-Nazi pictures?"

The real quarrel of Senator Wheeler and his committee associates seems to be with the United States government and the nation's defense program as a whole, rather than with the motion picture industry, for this industry, in its presentation of historical, fictional and news pictures appears to have been doing a commendable job in co-operating with the government in awakening the American public to the dangers that have been steadily increasing during the past two years and against which more determined action is now being taken.

The antagonism of Wheeler and his little group of isolationist associates will probably be construed as a higher compliment than the motion picture industry is accustomed to receive.

Rumors Travel Fast

THE New York Herald Tribune recently printed a story by one of its Washington correspondents which shows the speed at which unfounded rumor can travel. Two men, on a downtown street corner, agreed to an experiment. They concocted a rumor which one of them was to spread at once. He told it to six persons. The other man, noting the time, took a taxi to the Capitol. He was to look at his watch the instant he heard their rumor repeated. The ride required eight minutes and the rumor arrived just three minutes later. In the total elapsed time of 11 minutes, however, it had grown from the simple invention of the two men to a detailed and specific falsehood.

Members of the human family are easy marks in this respect. Men and women who think themselves canny when they say, "You can't believe anything you see in the newspapers," believe gossip and rumor without question and proceed to spread them, often with embellishments. As a matter of fact, the American press maintains a high level of truth and accuracy. If the public were left to the mercy of its own rumors, without the correcting influence of carefully gathered and printed news, it might soon slump again into ancient superstition and fear.

Now that his children have completed high school, a Texas father has enrolled for the course—but it'll take more than that to keep up with the youngsters.

It was the Leavenworth Times that thought to remark: "So long as we don't begin shooting off guns, Americans can continue to shoot off their mouths."

Still awaited is the personal experience story of a Nazi fifth columnist entitled, "How I ran out of Iran."

Latest word is that there is no gasoline shortage—and has Ickes been trying to trick us?

White Host Rides

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

(The material for the following column was sent to Elsie Robinson by Captain Cecil Wightwick Haywood (British), and the phenomenon was the subject of much discussion when it was first brought to the attention of the public in April, 1919. In her own words, Elsie Robinson brings to you the stirring inspirational account of one of the most amazing stories of all time.—Ed. Note.

IT'S ONE of those things you can't explain. You can count cannon—estimate the number of planes. But here's something you can't count, estimate or plot on any blue-print. All I know is—hundreds testified to its truth, thousands saw the result. Maybe it's worthwhile including, when you start reckoning chances today.

For it isn't just the thing you SEE that turns the trick—many a time it's the thing you forgot to list.

It happened in Bethune, back in 1918, with things breaking bad for the Allies, hope fading out, all along the line. For days the two armies had been pounding each other across the space of blasted earth and bloodied slime. The Germans were advancing steadily. The civilized world was on its knees, praying. Only a few hours more, and then —. Still the slogged Tommies hung on.

Suddenly the shelling rose to a hellish din . . . focusing upon the raddled strip of soil. Had Fritz gone barmy, wasting his fire like that . . . shooting where there was nothin' but stinkin' pits and pieces of what had been men? Didn't he . . . W-H-A-T! As abruptly as it started the shellfire stopped! Silence swooped catching the British breathless, spraddled like monkeys, staring senselessly. Then, croaking through broken lips whistling from gas-bombed lungs came the shout:

"Look! Look—over there! The Fritzies are going! Gom, blime, just when they 'ad us licked! LOOK!"

The smoke lifted. Through it, a rabble of men fled in frantic confusion, discarding guns and kits as they ran For an instant, the stunned Tommies gaped, then took after . . . returning presently with prisoners who shambled blindly at their heels. Questioned, they could not reply. Seemed not to hear . . . After long waiting, the answer came in halting gasps.

They'd been advancing, celebrating their success, muttered a German officer. Suddenly before them the fire had burst, as bewildering to them as to the English—a wall of flame, shutting the foe away. Then the incredible had happened! Straight through the fire, a file of men emerged—men in white, riding white horses, carrying strange blades such as the Crusaders had once used. On they came, silent, unsmiling, their eyes white blazing slits. Bombs burst beneath them . . . shells rained upon them . . . earth vomited death. Yet never a horse faltered or fell! . . . So they advanced, softly, unswerving, until the horror grew beyond the bearing. Then, with one scream, the Germans broke their ranks and fled.

"But we saw no such men!" the British cried.

The German stared. "So?" he muttered. "But we saw—we know. They were sent, those men, for a sign. They fight for you. We are defeated—you have won. For us this is the end." He stopped.

That was in April, 1918. The Armistice was signed in November.

AS I've said, it's one of those things you can't explain. You may smile, shrug—sneer "such things can't happen." Yet they do! Nor is their cause as mysterious as it may seem. The Shining Host was no miraculous illusion; it was born of forces which men have marshalled within themselves since life began. It rode unscathed because it was wrought of elements which nothing can destroy . . . of faith and courage of self-sacrifice . . . or every act of grace that has lifted men from the slime to the stars.

Such acts are not vague, weak gestures. They are tangible as steel, brick, mortar, dynamite. They carry terrific power. You and I did not see them riding at Bethune. But daily we see their glory in our common lives. They always have and always will help man in his hour of need. They always will turn the tide against the Powers of Darkness.

THEY TURNED THE TIDE IN 1918. THEY WILL TURN IT IN THE DAYS TO COME. BUT HOW AND WHEN? NO ONE CAN ANSWER THAT. BUT WE CAN FIGHT . . . BELIEVE . . . HOLD ON. AND THROUGH THE FLAME, THE HOST IN WHITE WILL RAISE AND RIDE AGAIN!

The Turnpike Pays.

On Oct. 1, Pennsylvania will have completed one year's operation of its toll turnpike which covers 160 of the 197 miles between Pittsburgh and Harrisburg, eliminating all road and grade crossings en route, going through the Alleghenies by way of nine tunnels instead of over them, and cutting 80 minutes from average times made over the older Lincoln Highway.

Tolls are $1.50 for one way, less for shorter distances, and $2.25 for the round trip. With a month of the first operating year to go, receipts were already over the $2,670,000 originally estimated as needed to meet all costs. It is on the point of costs that the usefulness of the highway as an example mostly rests. If it more than pays its way, we can look for many such installations which will bring highway building progress to a par with motor vehicle improvement—Detroit News.

How It Started

—By JEAN NEWTON

"Innocuous Desuetude"

It is to Grover Cleveland that we are indebted for the coining, preservation and perpetuation of the phrase "innocuous desuetude" for innocent disuse.

The allusion was to a bill known as the Tenure-of-Office Act, whose tenor was that the president did not have the right to remove cabinet members without the senate's permission.

This law had been on the books since 1867 when Congress passed it over President Johnson's veto; but it was considered a dead letter and disregarded.

In a message delivered to congress on March 1, 1886, however, Grover Cleveland said of an attempt to resurrect the statute:

"After an existence of nearly twenty years of almost innocuous desuetude these laws are brought forth."

The expression was a happy combination and immediately became current for any harmless discontinuance of a practise or custom.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Broader Picture of His Reasons For Ultimatum Given By President

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—The group of congressional leaders who conferred with the president before last week's historic broadcast got a much broader picture of the reasons behind the ultimatum than the president gave over the air.

He grimly informed his Capitol Hill chiefs that Hitler no longer could be trusted to respect the neutrality of American vessels anywhere in the world—that Hitler, in fact, had issued secret orders to "fire on sight."

Indeed, the president added gravely, the fuehrer went so far as to instruct U-boat commanders to "search down" American vessels.

"We can have only one answer to this," Roosevelt said, in effect. "For our own safety, we must beat Hitler to the punch when we encounter him on the high seas. That is why American ships and planes which encounter German submarines and raiders, in waters that we deem necessary to our defense, have been ordered to shoot first."

The president went into some detail explaining the incident of the American battleship that was stalked by a Nazi submarine, to which he referred briefly in his broadcast.

"This happened before the Greer incident and it is further confirmation of our contention that, despite Nazi denials, the Greer was fired on first.

"I have a complete report from the commanding officer of the battleship, which was in the North Atlantic. This report shows that the sub maneuvered for four or five hours to get the battleship in a position where it could be torpedoed. There is no question about the intention of the sub commander. He would have sunk the battleship if possible."

The president held that, in the light of this and other recent experiences, it would be fatal to assume that American vessels are any more secure from attack than British warships.

"We can only assume," he said, "that when a Nazi sub or raider is in the vicinity—or within firing distance—of an American ship, it is there for one purpose only—to sink the American ship."

Missing Washington.

AFTER reading his address to the congressional group, the president invited criticism. But except for one or two clarifications no changes were made.

One suggestion produced a merry interlude in the otherwise grim conference. It came from House Foreign Affairs Chairman Sol Bloom, famous for so diligently promoting the anniversary of George Washington.

When the president read that part of the speech reviewing the measures against piracy taken by Presidents Adams and Jefferson, Bloom remarked:

"Why don't you mention George Washington? He sent a strong message to congress on the necessity of protecting our vessels in time of war."

There was a loud laugh from Sol's colleagues.

Most favorable comment on the speech came from Senator Tom Connally of Texas and Representative Clifton Woodrum of Virginia, acting speaker. Both warmly complimented the president's speech and predicted that "all true Americans will applaud it."

Note: The Washington message to which Bloom referred was sent to congress Dec. 7, 1796, and dealt with the necessity of protecting our sovereignty on the seas during the war between France and England. It stated in part: "To secure respect to a neutral flag requires a naval force, organized and ready to vindicate it from insult or aggression. This may even prevent the necessity of going to war by discouraging belligerent powers from committing such violations of the rights of the neutral party as may first or last leave no other option."

Senator "Pappy."

SCENE: Radio room in the House office building, Washington.

TIME: Any Thursday evening.

CHARACTERS: Senator Lee O'Daniel "Pass the Biscuits, Pappy") and his hill-billy band.

The senator from Texas, with his troupe, has come to the studio to make a recording. Immediately after the show, records of the performance are shipped to 14 radio stations in the Lone Star State.

The hill-billy band has a hard time warming up. Ezra with his accordion; Micky Wicky (O'Daniel's son), with his bull fiddle; Texas Rose, singer; Caesar and Happy, with their violins, and the Texas songbird, with guitar and voice—plus the maestro himself—struggle a long time.

Pappy is displeased. "Micky, raise that bull fiddle. . . . Ezra, get 'roun' to he other side of the mike. . . . No, no, it ain't right; let's try it a key lower."

Finally, the senator spits out his chewing gum, and the happy company swings into a rendition of "Beautful Texas."

This is a musical prelude to set folks to feeling' right. Then Pappy steps up to the microphone to greet the home folks as a senator in Washington, tells them how he misses Texas, bee-utiful Texas; how he helped remove joint-returns from the new tax bill and thus "prevented Texas mothers from becomng chattel slaves."

Then, as the half-hour show is over, Pappy congratulates himself on being the composer of two songs on the program, but complains that this radio business is expensive.

"Back in the days when I was campaigning for governor," he says, "they offered me $2000 a program. While I was governor, I got free time on the air. But now I'm havin' to pay good money to go on the air."

Those who heard the show could well understand.

Who ordered this policy change, the leftist editors, closely allied with Lewis, refuse to say.

Tucker Takes Look Around

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW ORLEANS—What a town this is....When I get back to it my heart seems to skip a beat....When I walk its streets I have the feeling that I am reading someone's intimate, personal letters, written a long time ago. ....When I think of how the wine is again being taken to La Guillotine in Paris, I look about and reflect that here are streets as French as anything in Paris, yet instead of La Guillotine I see mammy dolls, pralines, sugarcane and souvenirs.

I have been cramming my pockets all day with folders and souvenirs—the Creole Tales of George W. Cable, and the light-hearted prowls through French Town with Lyle Saxon; miniature cotton bales, a pirate's bludgeon....I am probably the world's champion collector of bric-a-brac on short notice.

FROM what I can see of the town it is humming....Tourists are here and so is the U. S. army....Telephone calls from John McKay, former head of the New Orleans dock board and an old fishing pal of mine; from Fay Thomas, whom I knew at the Carter in Cleveland, at the New Yorker in N. Y., and who now is managing-director of the Roosevelt here; from Lyle Saxon....

It was good to see George Haley, jr., again....He is locally my boss and managing editor of the Times-Picayune....Through his courtesy have come guest cards to the Boston Club....We had a fine confab with friends at our rooms at the St. Charles and finished off with an exciting dinner at Antoines. Roy Alciatore wasn't there, but his boys were on their toes.... We sat around a table in the 1840 room for hours and had pampano and crepes suzettes....It was the first time I had touched French bread in three years....Dolores Wendling and John Hewlitt, of Paramount Pictures, were there, and Hewlitt told of the tragedy that had struck swiftly at Blake McVeigh, a friend of ours.... Blake's son, on his 21st birthday, was dead of a motor accident in Detroit.

CURRENTLY showing in New Orleans movie theaters is the Dorothy Lamour picture, "Aloma of the South Seas," which accounts for all those young girls strolling the streets in sarongs. This is Miss Lamour's home town, and those girls want to be like her Miss Lamour's name used to be Lambour, but she took off the "b"....I talked to some of the little sarongs and here is what they said about the big sarong:

Gloria Verrett: "My mother named me for Gloria Swanson, but I would like to be like Dorothy. She is cut out for animal pictures. She is best in a sarong. A lot of people in New Orleans think this."

Bessie Lee Denoux: "I like love scenes. I do not like Dorothy so well in city pictures. I think she is best in a sarong."

Another little sarong, whose name was O'Nelia, said: "Dorothy used to work in a bank here. She went to Beauregard school. She is so natural and unaffected. Some actresses are always acting and you know it. Dorothy acts natural."

The movies, it seems, are about to claim New Orleans for its own. Two others are about to break forth—"Birth of the Blues," with Bing Crosby, and "Louisiana Purchase"—with a New Orleans locale....I always thought the blues were born in Memphis, but they squared that, they tell me, by having one of the boys in the band named Memphis Bill.

Wild Plums

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

AFTER a walk through brush and rutty roads, I sprawled on the grass beside a wild plum hedge, at the foot of a slope, along a meadow brook. The plums were partly ripe, and I lay awhile, sampling the pungent flavor of a few scarlet-cheeked spheres that had fallen by the wind—and a little judicious shaking of the bough on my part.

The thick thorny branches were loaded, but most of them clung, awaiting frost. The leafy sprays were yellowing. Thorny twigs intertwined to make a prickly, matted top that protected its treasure well. Taller trees were in the center and shorter ones outside, so that the twisted dwarfish branches looked like a gigantic hedge, and made a well-nigh impenetrable thicket.

I remembered how, as boys, my brothers and I had laid heavy boards on the tangled tops of a similar hedge and when the thorny twigs were pressed down as far as they would go, we had walked along the swaying, skyline boardwalk, to pick the luscious wild fruit and fill our pockets and our small woven baskets.

How old such fruit must be! Perhaps the Mound Builders refreshed themselves from this same straggly thicket. We know the Indians used them. And when settlers brought domesticated trees across the ocean and wed them to these wild and sturdy kinds, the union brought forth many large, delectable varieties.

But the newer kinds are not so hardy. Always the orchardist must care for and pamper them; must feed them well, cultivate the soil and spray religiously. And even then some evil worm may reach the heart and spread disease and ruin through the entire circulatory system, so that the new tree dies, seemingly without cause, like Jonah's gourd!

Wild plums grew so abundantly in the Pennsylvania hills of my boyhood that they became a profitable autumn harvest. We stored bushels of them in the cool moist cellar for proper ripening and a dense wild fragrance filled the cellar first, then perfumed the rooms above. Weeks afterward, when all the doors were closed, that strange fruity perfume would still be there—and now, tasting the pungent sweetness of a scarlet cheeked wild plum, I know a quick surge of nostalgia for days that will never come again.

CANADA BUILDS BOOM CENTERS FOR WAR WORK

Assembly Line Technique Used To Overcome Acute Housing Shortage.

FORT ERIE, Ont. — (U.P.) — Canada's answer to the wartime housing-shortage problem is being rushed to completion here in the form of prefabricated homes which are constructed rapidly, rented reasonably and may be removed when emergency need for them ends.

In a manner similar to the rising of boom towns in the old west years ago, a wartime village of 234 homes is rapidly taking shape on the outskirts of this Canadian border community for the convenience of defense workers.

Just 12 days after the first carload of lumber was delivered, eight houses had been erected. Providing lumber is available, the entire group should be finished within three months.

The Fort Erie project is the furthest advanced of scores of similar efforts started by Wartime Housing, Ltd., to provide needed housing for the sudden influx of war-industry workes in various parts of the Dominion.

In the local project Wartime Housing, Ltd., took over 380 lots from Fort Erie and will retain title to them at least until the end of the emergency. At that time, if local home owners find it too difficult to rent their homes, the new units will be dismantled and stored or shipped elsewhere.

Foundations for the houses consist of large logs, stripped of bark and treated with creosote. Floor joists, roofs and gables are fabricated at the project. "Jigs" are provided for the workmen, slotted to receive the exact piece of lumber, and carpenters, working in pairs, can assemble any one section in 24 minutes.

Wall and partition panels are assembled at a shop in an old cattle barn at the Canadian National Railway spur an eighth of a mile away. Siding, roofing and other construction are built in the normal way.

Prefabricated sections are bolted together. Three-inch insulation is laid under the Norwood pine floors, 2-inch rock wool batts are placed between the walls and a three-quarter inch insulation board goes over the ceiling.

Smaller units will provide a living room, two bedrooms, a kitchen and a bathroom. In the larger units, downstairs rooms will be slightly larger. The type of heating unit will be up to the tenant.

W. R. Manock, chairman of a committee in charge of the project, said no rents had as yet been established for the new homes.

"Nothing can be done until it can be definitely determined what the cost of these homes will be," he said. "However, I expect that the smaller will rent for about $20."

FACES LOSS OF AIR SERVICE

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah—(U.P.)—The birthplace of American commercial aviation—Salt Lake City—appears likely to lose most of its major schedules before the end of 1941.

Some months ago Western Air Express applied for permission to route several trips from Denver to Los Angeles, via Grand Junction, Colo., and Las Vegas, Nev.

Recently, United Airlines applied for a similar shift on two major trips. In both cases, the airlines cited interruption of schedules resulting from fog as the motivating cause.

We, Too, Are Ready to Do Our Part

It takes more than soldiers to defend a nation.

It takes more than warships and fortresses.

It takes more than factories equipped to make planes, tanks and guns.

Behind all these must stand the spirit of defense, the determination of a people united in a common purpose. Without this spirit—soldiers, warships, fortresses and factories are of no avail.

Let us, therefore, dedicate our energies to the single purpose of preparedness.

Let us build, as well as we can and as fast as we can, all the implements of defense that our own boys will need should war come to the shores of our country.

Let us show the rest of the world that here is a nation of 130 million Americans standing shoulder to shoulder to preserve their inalienable rights and the liberties of a free people—a people united in the spirit of defense.

Iceland Patrol Stands Guard In World's Worst Weather

STORMS JUST ROUTINE TO NAVY FLIERS

Inter-Plane Phone System Maintains Contact In Fog, Clouds.

(Editor's Note: The submarine attack on the U. S. S. Greer and President Roosevelt's "shoot on sight" order brings the North Atlantic patrol sharply into the news spotlight. Here is the first in a series of five exclusive articles by a reporter who made a flying trip with the navy over the patrol area.)

By MORGAN M. BEATTY
(AP Feature Service Writer)

ABOARD U. S. NAVY PATROL BOMBER OVER THE ATLANTIC—"Line squall ahead!"

The voice comes to my right ear in the headset. I turn to the flight commander beside me in the pilot's perch forward. He's talking to me in the plane's phone system.

MORGAN BEATTY

His finger points ahead, to the right. There lies a long black cloud, stretching out all of 10 miles like a huge water moccasin asleep on a log.

The pilot speaks again. This time he's giving orders to the plane accompanying us, a mile or more off to the right. He uses the interplane phone system. This time his voice hits my left ear.

"Advise me if you lose contact; I will assign altitudes."

"Roger," comes back another voice.

The flight commander smiles, explains into my right ear. "That means he has received orders."

We are hurtling eastward over the North Atlantic. Earlier in the morning—much too much earlier for a late sleeper—we had gathered in the cabin of the operations officer aboard a huge floating air base. Its position is a secret, but it's "somewhere in the North Atlantic."

There the whole squadron received final instructions for an assigned mission. Specific orders were secret. But broadly, we were told to cover part of the lanes traveled by American merchant ships and war vessels plying between the United States and new Army and Navy bases in Iceland.

We had taken off at 3:45 a. m. in dark, choppy seas and flown for an hour or more to meet the dawn. The sun peeped over magnificent red Chinese pagodas outlined in the clouds. When I saw them I wondered why all aviators aren't poets, but my commander had other ideas on his mind. He said we could have picked a better day.

With that line squall in front of us, I know what he means. But our two 1,000 horsepower engines churn us steadily toward the storm at 150 miles an hour. The commander explains the squall is not too black for safe navigation, so we will skirt the end of it and remain on our course. In a few moments big chunks of fog hit us.

I look for our companion plane, can't find it. Neither can the flight commander. Then the voice comes again:

"I'm at 12. Can't see you. Let me know if you climb." Calm and easy it is, like the voice of a fellow who'd casually dropped a collar button. He might have added, "Darn it!"

The flight commander takes his transmitter, glances at the sea of instrumerts in front of him.

"Hold 12," he says. "I'll hold six-seven-zero."

"Wilco."

"That means he will comply," the right earphone explains. The commander throws the ship off "Iron Mike," the automatic pilot, takes over himself. They're holding different altitudes to avoid collision.

The fog closes in tighter. From a sunny morning lined with racing fleecy-white clouds, we plunge into twilight. The plane jerks back and forth. Rain and wind hit the hull, sound like corn in a popper.

Suddenly we're out in the clear. Our companion emerges to the right and above.

Somebody punches me in the shoulder blade. The bearded face of our mechanic grins.

"Soup's on."

Slowly, I clamber down from the pilot's seat pedestal. It's bitter cold in spite of the arctics, the flying suit, and the fleece-lined jacket they'd loaned me. My legs creak.

I remember the boys back in Washington. They're probably enjoying a well cooked lunch in luxurious comfort, and here I am working like a horse. And they thought I was lucky to get this assignment. If they only knew!

The mechanic sits me down to lunch. What a lunch!

Juicy tender steak, salted and peppered to a queen's taste. A beautiful fruit salad. Peas. Toast, butter, grape jelly. Steaming hot tea. All laid out on the navigator's table—right over a huge chart of the Atlantic ocean.

"Where are we?" I ask between mouthfuls.

"Pick up your lunch," says the navigator. I do, and he points his dividers to a blank spot about midway between New York and London.

"About there," he says.

I fall to again. By the time I get that steak under my belt, life's worth living.

The mechanic points to the plane thermometer. "Five above zero, centigrade," he says, hugging himself.

Now I begin to feel sorry for the boys back in Washington, sweltering in summer heat while I ride high, cool, and contented over the North Atlantic.

(Tomorrow: Tracks in a Trackless Ocean.)

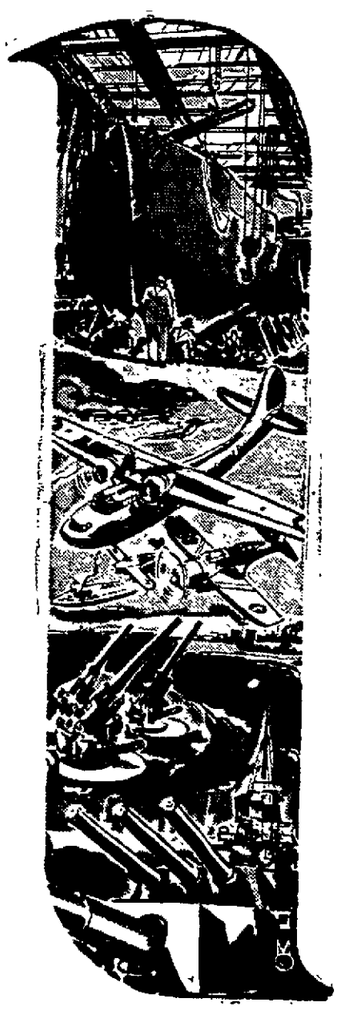
EMPIRE
Responds to the Country's Call for National Defense



As the National Defense Program increases in scope, both through direct government agencies and through Empire's many customers supplying defense needs, daily Empire ships more and more tonnage of its products to strengthen America's Democracy. In an industry, which is the foundation of our Defense Program, Empire has constantly been alert to the increasing need and demand for its steel and steel sheets.
Within the past month thousands of visitors availed themselves to an opportunity to visit the plant and witness the various ways in which Empire is meeting the challenge of the Defense Call. As the people of the community watched the processing of ingots, bars and sheets, they grew proud in the knowledge that from their city and from its many plants is shipped a continual and increasing flow of Mansfield products to strengthen the cause to which we are dedicated.

SIX CASES ON COURT DOCKET

Appeal of Bellville Man on Calendar For Appellate Court Session.

Six cases will be considered by the Fifth district appeals court when it convenes Wednesday at the Richland county courthouse.

Among the cases on the docket is one involving the appeal of William Lindsay, Bellville, from a 120-day workhouse sentence imposed several months ago in probate court on a conviction for contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

The jury is expected to hand down a decision in the case of the Shelby Mutual Plate Glass and Casualty company against defendants in damage suits totaling $60,000 pending in Cuyahoga county courts.

The insurance firm brought an action to escape liability for payments of any judgments awarded in the cases which were filed as the result of a fatal traffic crash in 1938 on Lexington avenue in Mansfield. The firm issued an insurance policy on one of the cars, but contended it was void at the time of the accident.

Evidence in the appeals case was heard last month by Atty. William F. Black, Mansfield, as referee, and submitted to the appeals court. Most of the other cases on the docket are appeals from common pleas court decisions in damage suits.

Members of the district court are Charles C. Lemert, Zanesville, presiding judge; Judge Charles W. Montgomery, Newark, and Judge Clyde C. Sherick, Ashland.

CHAGRINED

MADERA, Cal. — (U.P.) — Those persons whose automobiles have run out of gasoline at night, forcing them to trudge to the nearest service station, may well sympathize with a man who called at the gasoline station owned by J. A. Whitaker.

The station had been closed for the night and Whitaker's bulldog forced the prospective customer to make a hurried retreat. The dog retained a section from the seat of the man's trousers. The man also dropped a three-gallon gasoline can, a siphon hose and a gasoline credit card.

Notched Stick Tells Sea Drama

One of the three survivors of the torpedoed freighter Sessa, First Mate H. J. Bjerrejaard, is pictured with the stick that he marked off the 20 days that he and five of the Sessa's crew were adrift before being picked up by the U. S. Destroyer Lansdale. This "log" of the days their boat was adrift also tells of the three men in the boat who died of exposure.

FLIGHT TRAINER MAKES TESTS FOR BEST PILOTS AT AIRPORT

Aptitude tests for flying such as those that are being made at Mansfield airport today and tomorrow by use of the Sinclair flight trainer show that young men between the ages of 18 and 23 make the best pilots, flight trainer attendants said.

Duplicating maneuvers of a plane in flight while very much on the ground the trainer is the same type of plane used by the army in some of its training work.

Mansfielders wishing to test themselves may do so free, company spokesmen said.

The trainer is an abbreviated airplane rigged about 15 feet from the ground. A "wishbone" consisting of two steel fork-like prongs suspends the ship in mid-air while a propellor provides a slipstream of air.

The stream of air allows the pilot to maneuver the plane as though it were in the air by forcing the trainer about as the pilot moves controls.

HIT BY AUTO

GALION—An X-Ray will be taken today to determine the injuries of Mrs. S. A. Rhoades, wife of Dr. Rhoades, local chiropractor, who was struck by a taxi, Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Rhoades had stepped out of her car and was crossing the street to the postoffice when she was struck by the taxi, driven by Ray Asher, police said.

She was taken to the office of a local physician for treatment and later returned to her home where she is confined to her bed.

REPORTED IN POOR HEALTH

WILLARD — The condition of Mrs. L. Simmermacher, who has been in failing health for some time, is reported to be very critical. Her children, Lewis Simmermacker of Cleveland and Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Simmermacker of Canton, were here for the weekend, and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Simmermacker of Eastport, Me., are spending two weeks here.

NAZIS CLAIM 270,000 REDS ANNIHILATED

Assert Nine Soviet Divisions Slaughtered In Battle Near Leningrad.

"highly important bridgeheads" across the lower Dnieper river in the Ukraine, clearing the way for a drive into the rich industrial valley of the Don.

At sea, the Russian reported the sinking of ten Nazi warships—seven troop transports and three escorting warships—in northern waters off Norway and Finland, and declared that the Germans had been smashed in an attempt to land troops on the fortified island base of Oesel, off Estonia.

An inkling that Germany now was hurling all available manpower into the bloody 87-day-old struggle, possibly to replace staggering losses, was seen in a British report that Hitler had been compelled to withdraw "nearly 500,000 seasoned troops" from Nazi-conquered Belgium, Holland and France to meet the demands of the Russian campaign.

Young recruits and soldiers over 35 years old were said to have replaced the half million sent to the front, and the British said there was reason to believe western Europe still was garrisoned by 800,000 German troops.

Presumably, this force would be sufficient to make the British hesitate before risking an attempt to invade the continent.

Germany's role as master of most of Europe was high-lighted anew by stern measures against revolt in the conquered countries.

Ten more French hostages were reported to have been shot in reprisal for attacks on members of the German arms, and in Marseille, a military court condemned one man to death for treason and meted out prison terms ranging from one to 10 years to 13 persons convicted of distributing Communist propaganda. In all, 30 persons have been convicted for such activity in France during the last 24 hours.

In the Nazi-conquered Norway, the Germans lifted the week-old state of civil siege in Oslo, the capital, after two Norwegian labor leaders had been executed and 250 to 300 others arrested as a result of a reported mass strike by 40,000 workers.

Simultaneously, it was announced that a Norwegian journalist, accused of fomenting opposition to the Quisling government, had been sentenced to life imprisonment.

Norwegian school authorities were warned that their institutions might be closed if there was any indication they were encouraging "communistic elements."

Reports Bulgaria Joining Axis

LONDON —(AP)— The London Daily Sketch said today that the Bulgarian government has agreed upon full co-operation with Germany in the war against Russia.

The report said the reich promised Bulgaria the portion of Greece extending from Salonika to the Turkish frontier.

The pact will become effective immediately after an impending Black Sea attack on Crimea, regardless of the result of the attack, according to the sketch.

British, Reds, Move Into Iranian Capital.

LONDON —(U.P.)— Official British quarters announced today that British and Russian troops are advancing on Teheran and are expected shortly to occupy the Iranian capital.

The Anglo-Russian decision to occupy Teheran, it was said, was made prior to the abdication today of Shah Riza Khan Pahlevi.

The action was decided upon, official quarters said, because the German legation has been obstructing persistently the surrender of German nationals to the British and Russians.

The Shah gave ill health as the reason for his abdication. He was succeeded by his eldest son Crown Prince Mohammed Riza Pahlevi, 21, as "rightful king according to the constitution," radio Therean announced.

British official quarters could not at once confirm the news but admitted that it had caused them no surprise.

U. S. War Materials Arrive In Russia.

LONDON — (AP) — W. Averell Harriman, head of the United States delegation to the Moscow war needs conference, said today United States products and raw materials already were reaching Russia in substantial quantities.

"They will continue to reach the Russians in increasing amounts," the lease-lend expediter said. "We have a good idea of what the Russians need and we will do our utmost to see that they get it."

Harriman said that United States ships were "going freely" to Vladivostok, Soviet far eastern port, but he added that "great problems are involved" in getting materials through to the Soviets.

A commission headed by Lord Beaverbrook, minister of supply, was designated today to confer with Soviet and United States representatives in Moscow on ways of meeting Russia's war needs.

Two Fugitives from Kansas Prison Killed by FBI Agents.

TOPEKA, Kan. —(U.P.)— Mike Hight and Frank Wetherick, two of five convicts who tunneled out of the Kansas prison last May, were shot to death today when they tried to rob the Macksville, Kan., bank.

The men were shot by agents of the Kansas Bureau of Investigation and local officers who had waited for them for 10 days after receiving word that they intended to rob the bank.

Last Christmas as a gesture of appreciation, Gen. Lahm sent each member of the club a year's membership in the Y. M. C. A. Plans are being made to enlarge the club this year, according to the club advisor, E. C. Peet.

board auspices, he said, and any wage increases reached will be retroactive to today.

Charging the company with "stalling" in negotiations, the union went on strike May 28. The National Defense Mediation board on Aug. 14, proposed a return to work with further bargaining under the board's sponsorship, and it was under this proposal that agreement was reached to resume production of insulators used in the construction of Bonneville dam and other national defense projects.

Cement Products Strike In 2nd Day.

Production at the plant of Cement Products company, 369 Park avenue east, manufacturers of building materials, was curtailed today as truck drivers went into the second day of a strike for a wage hike and regulations of hours. Thirty-two other workers left their jobs in sympathy.

Although the management and labor seemed agreed upon the wage hike, little headway was being made in a settlement of the hours question.

H. J. Schmitz, manager of the company, said that he was willing to meet the demands of four truck drivers from Local 40 and for a 65-cents-an-hour rate rather than on a piece basis. He said he would not sign an agreement giving time and a half pay after 12 hours work daily but would pay it after 60 hours had been worked a week.

Russell Kemp, representative of the truckers announced last week that an agreement had been signed with the company, giving the truckers 65 cents an hour and a ten-hour day.

Truck drivers are not included in state laws restricting labor to a 40-hour week.

140 Go Out on Strike at Ashland.

ASHLAND One hundred and forty employes of the Improved Manufacturing company went on strike this morning, forming a picket line around the company plant at 8:30 a. m. according to A. Berkson, organizer for the United Garment Workers union, AFL local No. 294.

Told by local police they could not close the plant, strikers allowed foremen and bookkeepers inside the building, but no one else.

Berkson said that negotiations between the union and the employers had been going on for three weeks on the question of a closed shop and a 15 per cent wage increase, without an agreement being reached.

Shipbuilders End Strike at Lorain.

LORAIN —(AP)— Full crews resumed work on net tenders for the navy at the American Shipbuilding company's Lorain yard as CIO unionists returned to their jobs today, ending a strike in progress since Sept. 4. AFL unionists, who stayed home after two picket line clashes, had gone back to work yesterday.

An appeal by Sidney Hillman, coordinator for the OPM, paved the way for the return, on which the CIO Marine and Shipbuilding Workers Union voted unanimously at a meeting last night.

The CIO, protesting company recognition of the AFL after AFL won a company-wide consent election in the concern's seven Great Lakes yards, claimed it represents a two to one majority of local employes.

raw materials available for domestic production.

C. R. Terry, manager of the Cleveland area of the OPM division of contract distribution, was expected to head the conference here today. He termed yesterday's meeting in Columbus "very encouraging," adding that "smaller operators learned for the first time what they can do to participate in defense production."

He said the meetings in Mansfield and other northern Ohio cities should help to stabilize the labor situation by giving smaller firms enough defense business to lighten the shock of the sudden shift from domestic to government production.

One holder of a big defense contract brought five tons of samples with him to Mansfield and displayed them in a trailer in front of the hotel. Virtually all of the industrialists with contracts to "farm out" had blueprints and specifications to show the smaller "bidders" what the government expects of the producers of its materials.

The clinics were described by H. H. Lind, another OPM official who came here today, as an effort to "step up arms production and an attempt to eliminate unemployment but to do the job with plants that already exist and with workers already employed, or that formerly have been employed at the plants."

The conferences at the Mansfield-Leland hotel this afternoon and evening were expected to draw contract shoppers from industries in Mansfield, Shelby, Plymouth, Galion, Crestline, Ashland, Loudonville, Willard, Mt. Vernon and Mt. Gilead.

NAVY LOADS ITS GUNS TO CONVOY AID TO ICELAND

Puts Knox Order In Effect, Frees British Ships For Other War Efforts.

countries, prohibits Americans from traveling on belligerent vessels except under regulations issued by the president, requires transfer of title before goods can be shipped to belligerent nations, and bans the arming of American merchant ships.

One informed leader, requesting anonymity, said these courses were open:

1. To amend the neutrality law to permit the arming of merchant vessels.

2. To couple the arming of merchant vessels with an amendment permitting them to travel to Great Britain and other belligerent countries.

3. To wipe the neutrality law off the statute books.

This leader said that if he were guessing he would assume that Mr. Roosevelt would prefer the third course.

The discussion of future changes in the neutrality act would not compete, however, with the interest that attached to what was happening somewhere out in the Atlantic. At times not announced and long routes unspecified for reasons of military secrecy, various units of the fleet shifted from their previous patrol duties to the grimmer job of hunting down Axis raiders.

The broad outlines of the task were given by Knox yesterday in a speech to the American Legion at Milwaukee when he announced operations would begin today, with the navy ordered to "provide protection as adequate as we can make it for ships of every flag carrying lend-aid supplies between the American continent and the waters adjacent to Iceland.

That Knox's statement was broader than the "shoot-at-sight" policy set forth last week by President Roosevelt was the expressed belief of naval strategists, who said that adequate protection meant convoys.

Navy Reports 2,831 Warships Ordered.

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—The navy department announced today that it has contracted for 2,831 ships, every vessel authorized by law, under a $7,234,262,178 program calling for "creation of the greatest array of fighting ships under one flag the world has ever seen."

The navy made public a survey of its vast shipbuilding program to show the effect of recent speed-up steps taken in the rearmament program. The survey also called attention to the launching of small craft, which, the navy felt, had gone "almost unnoticed."

The survey showed that $460,000,000 is being expended for expanding private and public shipyard facilities. As a result, 375,000 men now are at work on ship construction and jobs for an additional 125,000 will be available by July 1, 1942, the navy said.

Legion Cheers Knox and La Guardia.

MILWAUKEE, Wis.—(AP)—Veterans of the American Legion temporarily put aside today their concern over the grave problems of war to devote a full day to the most colorful spectacle of the national convention — the annual parade.

It was to be a "short" parade in comparison with other years, only about 12 hours. The starting time was 9 a. m.

The Legion will resume its business Wednesday when committees, including that on national defense, will report.

The convention cheered to the rafters spokesmen for the national administration — Secretary of the Navy Knox and Civilian Defense Director LaGuardia, as well as a message from President Roosevelt himself — in a challenge against Nazi Germany.

Reversal of the Legion's traditional stand against American participation in foreign wars was advocated in a pending resolution which some leaders said was acquiring considerable support.

Speaking at a dinner for distinguished guests given by National Commander Milo J. Warner, the U. S. army chief of staff, General George C. Marshall, last night sought the Legion's help to save America's new army of selectees from the fate that befell the armed forces of France.

APPROVES PAY BOOST

COLUMBUS —(INS)— Columbus city council, acting to avert a threatened strike by city employes, approved legislation giving workers with four or more years service the maximum wages recommended in the recent Jacobs wage survey. The measure, signed immediately by Mayor Floyd Green, is effective immediately.

for a long time," and "shoves American opinion another step nearer war," these quarters said.

Berlin sources made the same comment on Attorney General Biddle's announcement that the neutrality law does not apply to such British outposts as Hong Kong, Burma and Suez.

Says Knox Made U. S. a Belligerent.

ROME—(U.P.)—The United States unequivocally declares itself a belligerent entering the war against the Axis without provocation as a result of the speech of Secretary of Navy Frank Knox, the Fascist editor, Virginio Gayda, said today in Giornale D'Italia.

Gayda emphasized the charge that the United States action against the Axis was taken upon American "initiative."

CHEF PREPARES NICKEL DINNER

PHILADELPHIA — (U.P.) — The next time your wife complains about the food budget being too low, just show her what a clever National Youth Administration chef can whip up in the way of a meal for a nickel.

At a dinner, 300 NYA workers dined on baked ham, cabbage, lima beans, corn bread, milk or hot chocolate and ice cream, for 5 cents each. The food was prepared chiefly from surplus commodities.

CHAPTER II

"I'm sure," said he, "they think the same about you. I don't blame them."

"How nice!"

"Dr. Watkins said you were exceedingly popular. Now I know why. I—look here, Miss Mayfield, would it be—?"

She interrupted. "Dallas Tower, if you intend to live in Rangeville, please call me Lillian. 'Miss Mayfield' makes me an old maid."

"Judas!" He murmured that more to himself, in elation, than to her—"You are, then, approaching middle age? Some lighted romance ruined your youth, no doubt."

They laughed gaily together.

"We'll get along," she predicted. "I know now you'll fit in here."

"What does it take to fit in here?"

"Oh, good humor. Politeness. Gentility. We're not very swift in this sleepy old town. We're rather snobbish, in fact. Nothing very modern, as you can see. You may not like us."

"I like it immensely! It's such a lovely town! Old trees, shrubs, flowers everywhere, even on the curbs. I—see here, Lillian, I especially like you. You're frank. And independent."

"That's Texan, Dr. Tower. Or do you know Texas?"

"No. I came from Chicago. Where is your Rio Grande?"

She laughed again. "It's farther from here than Chicago is, almost. Texas is huge. Dr. Watkins said you went to Northwestern, then post-graduate somewhere."

"Yes. He's Phi Beta Pi, too. He brought me here."

"You'll starve. The four doctors are all old citizens of Rangeville."

"Dr. Watkins wants to edge off. He wants to spend ten years fishing in Willow Lake, he says. Tired of delivering babies and probing sore throats."

"Then you won't starve. He does have a practice. Can you make friends with farmers?"

"I can try. I'm city reared, but—is farming all you have in this country?"

"Farms and traditions. Some cattle. Dad used to raise fine horses. And there's a little oil talk now."

"Oil, eh?"

"Just talk. There's a wildcat well near town."

They were rolling slowly up and down the residential streets of Rangeville, drinking in a spring moon and tasting the sweetness of flower-laden air.

"What's a wildcat well?" he asked.

"That's a gambler's chance. It's a well somebody is boring, hoping to find oil. They hardly ever do."

"But somebody does."

"Sure. It's why they gamble. Thad even put in $500. He's venturesome, like daddy was. The town's interested."

"Naturally. Oil would mean—new life and prosperity for Rangeville I suppose. Isn't that the history of oil booms, Lillian?"

"Yes. But it's not a threat here. Nothing ever has disturbed Rangeville. I used to think it awfully drippy and slow, but since I left college I love it more and more."

"Where'd you go?"

"A girls' school, in Dallas. City named for you."

"Coincidence," he nodded.

They had interests in common. College. Sports. Fraternity and sorority life. Lillian had been out of school only a few months but Dallas had been out and done a year's interneship in Cleveland's famed Charity hospital. The more he talked of his hopes and plans, the more Lillian liked him.

"I'm so glad you aren't selfish," she suddenly declared. "You do see medicine as a — a service, don't you, Dallas? Not just a career."

"Of course! Wouldn't you?" He was almost affronted. His voice and manner revealed that firm, aggressive challenge that is wholly masculine, and while she knew it was quite impersonal Lillian somehow felt a little tingle of physical pleasure from it. This very fact surprised her. Whatever did she mean, letting a new-boy-in-town touch her inwardly this way? She bit her lips and gazed off through the windshield. Lest she reveal her thoughts; but in just a moment she turned shyly to look at his profile again.

It wasn't slyly enough. Their eyes met—bang!—just like that, and a childish self-consciousness assailed both of them. Both laughed out loud, a laugh of youth, neither quite sure of the other but each sensing something new and rare and delightful here.

To hide her confusion she started humming gaily and pushing back a lock of taffy hair that wanted to flip in the breeze, and Dallas nosed his car up a slope past a sign saying "Buford Hill." The view from the top was so far and so velvety under the moonlight that he was about to park, when a muffled roar assailed them. The car stopped.

They looked quickly at each other again, boy and girl.

"Did you—did you hear that?" Lillian's face was grave.

Before he could make an answer, it came again—BR-ROO-O-OM! A louder, more ominous thunder, from a cloudless sky.

"From the west," Dallas whispered, senses alert, "and it must have been very—LOOK! Look there!"

He had stopped the car, and as he pointed Lillian saw too. Toward the westward was a glare. A new red-orange brilliance spurting skyward from a near horizon, billowing its flames like some geyser from hell itself.

"Oh!" Lillian's cry was a subdued shriek. "Oh!"

She drew away from her window as if herself in actual danger. Dallas had gripped her arm. The flames leaped, a gargantuan torch. Black smoke rolled above it adding the eerieness of the spectacle in the dim blueish glow of the moon.

"It can't be far!" Dallas cried, touching his starter in sudden decision.

Before Lillian quite realized it they were roaring at terrific momentum down Buford Hill again.

Because other people in Rangeville took four or five minutes to decide what had happened and where, Dr. Dallas Tower and Lillian Mayfield had a good start on them. The young couple sped down Buford Hill, turned right to go past the Langhorne estate and up the sweeping curve of North Marshall street, then took a short-cut that Lillian knew about through the meadow beside Thompson's pond. Thus they were the first helpers at the scene after the explosion.

As they approached the great flare, Dallas and Lillian were speechless before the majesty of it. The oil well obviously had "blown in," with explosive noises. The heat was powerful even when their car was 300 yards away. Dallas pulled up beside a barbed wire fence.

"It's oil!" some man yelled at them, running and waving both hands. "Oil and gas! . . . Oil and gas! . . . We've struck oil!"

He was a black, overalled pygmy silhouetted in the glare, and when he came nearer the grease on his face became visible, but he was smiling broadly and shouting in hysterical manner.

"You've been burned, man!" Dallas suddenly exclaimed, pointing to his clothing. "You must—"

"That don't make a damn! Look at her blow, will you. Look at her blow!"

"Look, Dallas, it's even burning the pine trees!" Lillian pointed to new bursts of flame. "The green pine trees!"

Dallas was out of the car now, opening the rear compartment to take out his doctor's kit. He ignored Lillian. "Are there other men — anybody else burned or hurt?" he demanded. All of them had to shout to be heard above the well's hiss and roar.

But the man had rushed on down the road toward town. Dallas took his bag and ran toward the well, Lillian following. They had to swerve behind shrubbery to get out of the intense heat, but even as they ran Dallas yelled back that he saw men near the derrick. By screening themselves behind pines and underbrush they came within 60 yards or so of the hellish blaze. Here, droplets of liquid flame fell about them. The odor was powerful now, too.

"For god's sake, Lillian you go back!" He had suddenly discovered her at his heels. "This is no place for—"

"There's a man lying on the ground right by the well!" she yelled.

"He'll be dead now. There's two more at that house. You go back!"

He quickly bent over a bushy pine sapling, stamped it off at the ground and lifted it before him like an umbrella. The thick needle foliage of it enabled him to make a dash across an open space and come to the pump shack quite close to the flaming well.

Groans and pleadings assailed him. Dallas dropped his screen, lifted one man bodily and ran back with him to the dense brush where Lillian was. With no words he put the form down at her feet and dashed back. Another man had gotten to his knees, and Dallas shouted encouragement to him. Then Dallas lifted a third inert form to his shoulder, put one arm around the staggering man and labored back to safety with them both. Before he reached Lillian this time he saw other men from town running. Lillian had gone out a way to wave them on. Last thing she heard Dallas shout was, "This is all we can help now! The fourth man is done for!"

She wasn't sure—it seemed like hours later—when Lillian arose wearily from her knees there in the woods where she had been serving as emergency nurse. She had helped Dallas, obeying his calm if shouted orders as best she could.

All around was a shrieking, roaring confusion. The flaring gas-oil well made fantastic lights. Men seemed to be running everywhere, thousands of them talking and yelling aimlessly. But somehow a truck roared up and the burned men were carefully lifted onto it after Dallas had done what he could. He ordered them driven quickly to the only hospital in town and he told two men to ride on the truck floor beside the wounded, giving last-second instructions as the motor roared off. Lillian was impressed by Dallas' commanding force, the emphatic almost dictatorial efficiency of the young doctor in spite of the hullabaloo and danger here.

Next moment she realized that she was being led away. She looked quickly back at Dallas gathering his bandages and bags and tools. Somebody had her firmly by the hand. The heat struck her bare head again. Night shadows were black dancing devils. She and whoever led her ducked their heads and ran toward the road away from the protection of the pine foliage which had become too scant anyway. They plumped and jumped and stumbled over a plowed field.

In full safety again, she lifted her head to see Dallas running near to her at one side, and then she turned to the man who held her hand.

"Martin!" she gasped. "I—oh—Martin!"

"Yonder is a stream," Martin Deale said. "Hickory creek. Let's hurry on to the bridge!"

Many more people were there. Out of the intense heat now, Lillian began to recognize faces turned toward the light. Men, women, young folk, all her townsmen, talking and pointing and stirring excitedly. She and Dallas and Martin elbowed through them. They came to a barbed wire fence and would have crawled through, but a farmer rushed up.

"Naw, you don't! Naw you don't!" he yelled belligerently. "Not a danged person can come in here. This is my land! This is mine! It's right next to it, right next to the oil field. I'll blow hell outen anybody tries to git my land!"

Milk Mixture for Stomach Ulcers

A recent medical discovery now being used by doctors and hospitals everywhere has proven unusually successful in the treatment of stomach ulcers caused from excess acid. It is a harmless preparation yet so effective that in many cases the pains of stomach ulcers disappear almost immediately after it is used. Also recommended for gas pains, indigestion and heartburn due to hyperacidity. Sufferers may now try this at home by obtaining a bottle of Lurin from their druggist. Lurin contains this new discovery in its purest form. Easy to take. Just mix two teaspoonfuls in a half glass of milk. Costs but little. Try a bottle. It must satisfy or money refunded. Lurin for sale by Weinberger's Leed's and drug stores everywhere.

GEN. JOHNSON:

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON — The die was cast in favor of our entrance into the World war when the lease-lend bill was passed in its existing form by overwhelming majorities and after fierce debate.

Johnson

The president's "shoot first" speech was as sure to follow after that sooner or later as day follows night. Long ago this column wrote: "A ton of munitions on the docks of Liverpool is of vital value to the British. A ton of munitions in the hands of our troops is a great aid to our defense. But a ton of munitions at the bottom of the Atlantic helps nobody but Hitler." If there are great losses of this precious American-bought stuff, how long will it be before our own public is going to ask: "Are we spending these billions just to sink them in the sea?"

This column has advocated a different course—aid to Britain but with a greater legislative control over its disposition and without delegating to the president an almost unlimited power to engage us in war at any time and at any place on the earth's surface.

However, when the lend-lease bill passed it recognized that the present menacing consequences were unavoidable and that engagement in war was only a matter of time. The nearer such a time approaches the less latitude we shall have in opposing specific acts of executive discretion. I have not criticized the president's "shoot first" speech because I thought it was a logical and inevitable consequence of the events that came before it.

But it does seem to me that the argument it contained could have been more frank and realistic—especially that part about "freedom of the seas." His is not really the ancient American doctrine of sea-rights of neutral nations to engage in peaceful commerce.

That is not what we are about to vindicate. It is a new assertion of a right to engage not in neutrality but in belligerency without taking full part in the war and full responsibility for it and to shoot it out with any belligerent that interferes.

That also may be inevitable and thoroughly defensible in view of the changed practices of modern war and the coming into full strength of over-water and under-water fighters.

We are not discussing that question here but only the apparently unshakable habit of some of our leaders of calling hard subjects by soft names, of sugar-coating every nauseous pill and of rarely putting issues before our people in terms of forthright fact.

There is no more freedom of the seas. That's the cause for which we fought World War 1. It was one of the principal paragraphs in Mr. Wilson's fourteen points. But it was scuttled at Versailles and it was the British who scuttled it. They wanted domination of the seas—domination by them on some kind of understanding with us.

That was also plain at the Harding limitation of armaments conference. The Neutrality act which Mr. Roosevelt himself sponsored and supported was not for "freedom of the seas." It was for surrender of a large part of that freedom. Place its pale remnants alongside the lease-lend act and the "shoot first" speech and you will see that they are complete contradictions.

I think the air would have a purer odor and our people would understand our position better if these fuzzy hypocricies were abandoned. I think that it should be said frankly that we are out for joint domination with Britain of the seas by force of arms and that we should repeal the neutrality acts.

ACTS TO OUST GERMAN ENVOY IN ARGENTINA

Chamber of Deputies Charges Von Therman Abused His Diplomatic Privilege.

(By International News Service)

BUENOS AIRES — Speedy action was anticipated today after the Argentine chamber of deputies by a vote of 78 to 1 approved a resolution declaring German Ambassador Edmund Von Thermann persona non grata.

The resolution charged specifically that the Nazi envoy has "exceeded his functions and abused his diplomatic privileges."

It was expected the Argentine foreign office will comply with the intent of the legislative action either by expelling Von Thermann or calling upon the German government to recall him.

Foreign Minister Ruiz Guinazu requested an appointment for today with acting President Castillo to decide upon the government's action.

The Buenos Aires newspapers Critica and Noticias Graficas both predicted the government will act on the chamber's recommendation.

Action by the government will follow final parliamentary procedure by the chamber.

The resolution which called on the government to expel Von Thermann within three days, passed its first reading on a "general vote," 78 to 1. Final enactment is expected after a second reading and a "detailed vote" today.

Approved while Germany's chief western hemisphere diplomat, Capt. Fritz Wiedemann, was stopping in Buenos Aires en route to Chile, the resolution also asked the government to dissolve all German charitable and cultural organizations in Argentina.

It is charged these groups are merely continuing the activities of the "Nazi party labor front" outlawed in this country more than a year ago.

The resolution was introduced by Raoul Damonte Taborde, chairman of the legislative committee which has been investigating subversive activities.

The ways of a woman are vague and various. One Mansfield motorist was positive of that today. Yesterday an automobile driven by William Tyler, 273 East Second street, figured in a collision with another driver, he climbed out to exchange all the information motorists usually do, concerning license numbers, names and addresses. The driver of the other auto was a woman, however, and took the view that Tyler was getting "fresh" when he asked her name. She refused to discuss the accident at all. Tyler was forced to get his information by checking her license number with police records.

The Weber Brewing company will have a team of southpaw bowlers in the Commercial C league this winter, and thereby hangs a tale. For years the bowlers at Weber's have been trying to get the company to sponsor a team but failed to gain favorable reaction. Recently they induced Julius Weber to try his hand at the sport, and after rolling two games he turned to Bill Hahn, and said: "Go get me a team." Bill is a left-hander, so he went out and lined up four more southpaws. They all deny that their Brooklyn-side hooks can be classed as screwballs.

LEADERS URGE QUICK ACTION ON PROPOSAL

Expect House Vote Tomorrow on Record-Breaking Revenue Measure.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Administration leaders called on the house to approve swiftly today the record-breaking $3,553,400,000 tax bill and speed it toward the senate and the White House.

They admitted, however, that if a roll call was demanded the huge revenue measure could not be approved until tomorrow.

As finally agreed upon by a joint senate-house conference committee yesterday, the compromise version calls for new and higher levies all down the line.

One of the most important changes is a reduction in personal income tax exemptions—from $2,000 to $1,500 for married persons, and from $800 to $750 for single persons.

The basic income tax rate would be increased from 4 to 10 per cent in the lowest bracket.

The measure also provides for new, stiffer excise levies—"nuisance taxes" on many necessities and luxuries, after Oct. 1. Corporation surtaxes likewise are to be upped.

Taking passage of the tax bill for granted, informed members of congress looked ahead to President Roosevelt's next lease-lend appropriation request, which they expected to receive by Wednesday or Thursday. Senator Barkley (Ky.), majority leader in the senate, predicted that the chief executive would ask between $5,000,000,000 and $6,000,000,000 in addition to the $7,000,000,000 already appropriated.

In a report to congress yesterday, the chief executive said that $6,281,237,421 of the existing fund had been allocated, that $3,555,587,895 had been obligated under contracts and that $388,912,115 had been spent. The total value of defense articles actually transferred to foreign governments was $246,394,372 up to Aug. 31, the president reported, compared with $75,202,426 up to May 31, when he made his first report.

In his message reporting on lease-lend activities, Mr. Roosevelt said that "we are not furnishing this aid as an act of charity or sympathy, but as a means of defending America.

"We offer it," he said, "because we know that piecemeal resistance to aggression is doomed to failure; because the ruthless war machine which now bestrides the doomed continent of Europe can be combatted only by the combined efforts of all free peoples and at all strategic points where the aggressor may strike."

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Speaking For Myself.

I FIND September a most confusing month. Not only are both baseball and football simultaneously in the air, but just as everybody moans that summer is over it gets hotter than any month Dante ever wrote about. This is also Optimist Month, when every Broadway producer has a play, every actor thinks he's got a part, every score has a hit song and there are two jobs for every chorus girl.

Kilgallen

Looking at the autumn lineup, you're impressed by the number of plays reaching New York—but, actually, I'll bet that if the true figures were known, playwrights from Maine to Albuquerque would get a severe attack of futility.

I'm not good at statistics, but I'd say that for every 200 plays written, 10 reach Broadway, and of those 10, no more than one or two stay around for any profitable length of time.

However, I am not trying to discourage Mr. Kaufman, Mr. Hart, Mr. Behrman or Mr. Sherwood. Keep right at the typewriters, boys.

To me one of the most interesting characters on Broadway is little Billy Livingston, the costume designer at Brooks. Billy is a small fellow who wears bright clothes with beautifully tailored shoulders, and who can run up a dream of a dress for a star, or spin sensational froth for a whole chorus, or even garb a burlesque queen if she is a very high class burlesque queen. Billy has a simply screaming time with all the girls, from Katharine Hepburn to Ethel Merman, but he is beginning to think he enjoys garbing strip teasers more than anyone else.

"I don't know," he mused the other day, "whether I'd rather dress Grace Moore—or undress Margie Hart!"

LUKENS TRIAL DRAWS TO END

Defense of Akron Man Accused of Murdering Girl Expected To Wind Up Today.

(By Associated Press)

AKRON — The defense of Albert B. Lukens, 58, being tried on a charge of first degree murder, drew to a close today after Lukens had denied choking to death Ruth Zwicker, 24, whose cremation in a church furnace on Easter Sunday he admitted from the stand.

County Prosecutor Alva J. Russell said his rebuttal witnesses would number five or six.

During a full day of testimony and cross examination yesterday, the former church janitor admitted that he had put Miss Zwicker's body in the furnace because he feared an investigation of her death.

Asked by Prosecutor Russell whether he had choked the young music teacher, Lukens vehemently asserted, "I did not."

He continued his stand that the young woman was injured in a fall after he had demanded a kiss. Miss Zwicker had gone to the church at which Lukens was employed to practice on the piano, and the defendant claims her death occurred when she fell against the piano and struck her head.

The state contends that in a "third confession" Lukens admitted choking Miss Zwicker, but the defendant repudiated the statement from the stand and claimed it was made under duress.

DEATH CLAIMS ANTON RADOZ

Mansfielder Dies At Home; Rites To Be Held Tomorrow.

Anton Radoz, 70, a resident of Mansfield for a number of years, died early today at the Richland county home. He was born in Hungary but spent the greater part of his life in this country.

Mr. Radoz was a member of St. Peter's Catholic church. There are no immediate survivors.

The body was removed to the Jones Memorial. Funeral services will be held at St. Pete's Catholic church tomorrow at 9:30 a. m., with Msgr. R. C. Goebel officiating. Burial will be in Mansfield Catholic cemetery.

PARADE, BAND CONCERT START DEFENSE STAMP DRIVE TONIGHT

A public demonstration of Mansfield's willingness to cooperate in the purchase of U. S. defense stamps and bonds will be held today at 7:30 p. m. at Central park.

Following a parade from Mulberry street and Park avenue west to the park, a defense stamp rally will be held in which those attending will hear a talk on defense savings stamps by John Catlett, Richland county representative in the general assembly, and a band concert of patriotic music.

The rally, sponsored by the Retail Merchants association, will launch the sale of defense stamps in more than 70 of the city's retail stores. Shoppers will be urged to use change to purchase the stamps.

Taking part in the parade will be the Mansfield high school band, which will present the patriotic concert, and members of Company F, Ohio State guard.

Mansfield stores are displaying posters boosting the sale of the defense stamps. After a shopper has purchased $18.75 worth of stamps, he may turn them in for a defense bond. The bond will return $25 upon redemption.

Stamps may be purchased for ten, 25 or 50 cents or for $1 or $5. Purchasers will receive an album when stamps are purchased for convenience in saving them.

The Merchants association is sponsoring a defense stamp window contest in connection with the sale. Starting today at 7 p. m. and continuing through Saturday, 45 firms will partially hide three defense stamps in their window displays.

Persons visiting the 45 windows and marking the locations of the stamp and writing a 25-word essay on "Buy Defense Savings Stamps Because" will be eligible for prizes in the contest.

Entry blanks may be obtained at any of the participating stores. The News-Journal and the Retail Merchants association office Prizes include a $25 bond, a $5 stamp, five $1 stamps, and ten 50-cent stamps.

APPEAL TO MRS. ROOSEVELT

FELICITY, O. —(AP)—Clermont county WPA workers appealed to Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Ohio's senators and district congressmen to help them obtain "a living wage in order to support our families in a manner commensurate with present-day living costs."

RITES PENDING

Funeral For Mrs. Hochsheid Waits Daughter's Arrival.

Funeral arrangements for Mrs. Dessie Hochsheid, 313 West Fourth street, who died Saturday evening were being held up today pending the arrival of her daughter, Miss Margaret Hochsheid, object of a week-end search to inform her of the death.

Miss Hochsheid left Mansfield to drive to Camp Beauregard, La., for a visit with her sweetheart, Corp. Herbert Southworth.

Corp. Southworth told Miss Hochsheid of her mother's death yesterday noon at Alexandria, La. Mrs. Chase Southworth, mother of Corp. Southworth, said today the couple was not expected to arrive here until this evening.

Mrs. Hochsheid was stricken Friday evening at the Southworth home, 637 Bowman street, where she had gone to stay until her daughter returned from Louisiana.

FOUR KILLED

Die When Automobile Plows Into Group on Highway.

INDIANA, Pa. —(AP)— An automobile plowed into a group of eight children on a highway near the Indiana county community of Dixonville last night, killing four of the youngsters and injuring the other four, two seriously, Coroner Edward L. Fleming reported.

Six of the children were riding in a large toy wagon and two others were pushing and pulling the vehicle when the automobile struck them.

The dead were Mike Sagal, 15, his sister, Katherine, 13; Nick Kaletta, 9, and his sister, Rose, 8, all of Dixonville, about 10 miles north of Indiana.

Fleming said the driver of the automobile told him the lights of an approaching car blinded him and he was unable to see the children.

Abandon Hope For Safety Of Missing Kayak

CLEVELAND — (INS) — Hope virtually was abandoned today that Arthur Szabo would be found alive when a four-hour search by a coastguard amphibian plane for the 23-year-old Canton man who set out in a kayak for Blenheim, Ontario, proved futile.

The plane search began when B. T. Bonnot, president of the company which Szabo was a welder, asked that the proposed route of the kayak's course be followed.

Szabo started out Saturday from Gordon park with the homemade craft, and a friend, Robert Craig of Canton, said he waited on a bench all night on the chance that Szabo might turn back from his proposed 50-mile trip.

News Happenings From Communities In Richland County, Vicinity

SHELBY CIVIC LEADERS MEET WITH COUNCIL

Heads of Clubs and Others Interested Confer on Traffic Problem.

SHELBY—A committee of civic leaders attended the city council session Monday night at the city hall to discuss the traffic problems in Shelby with the city officials.

Composed of the heads of a number of civic clubs and others interested in traffic safety, the committee brought out various complaints heard around the city on the traffic problems.

Among the various things brought out by the committee were: two-hour parking not enforced on streets designated by council for the limited parking; speeding on the main highways through the city, wrong side of the street parking, blocking of certain alleys in the city by parked cars and the police not bringing in reckless drivers.

The committee suggested at the meeting that the police give at least one hour a day to checking traffic violations.

Police Chief Leroy Coffey, who was present at the meeting, pointed out that a shortage of man power in the department since the new eight-hour day went into effect as a state law for patrolmen, had made it practically impossible for the police to patrol the streets by foot and have an officer in the police cruiser.

He pointed out that traffic signal lights were still needed on a number of the main highways through the city to slow the traffic down to stop the speeding. Four-way stop signs have been placed at the intersections near the grade schools. Coffey disclosed, to add to the safety of the school children and four new traffic lights placed recently at intersections used heavily by automobiles.

It was voted by the committee at the meeting to meet again with the council on Oct. 20 to find out whether the traffic problems had been solved by city police.

Councilman-at-large Charles Dye, vice president of the council, presided over the session in the absence of Mayor W. R. Morris, who is in Buffalo, N. Y., on a business trip.

APPROVE REPAIR OF COUNTY JAIL

Ashland Commissioners Award Contract to Fisk Bros. on Firm's Low Bid.

ASHLAND — Ashland county commissioners at their meeting yesterday awarded a contract for repairs to the exterior of the county jail to Fisk Brothers of Ashland. The firm's bid of $725 was the only bid submitted according to specifications, officials said.

The commissioners rejected a county ditch improvement petitioned for by D. R. Shaw. A remonstrance against the improvement was submitted by six persons claiming the improvement would cost more than the benefits to be derived.

Commissioners have set Sept. 29 as the date for final hearing on a proposed new road in Ruggles township.

Recent traffic violators in this county include Lester Yeater of near Hayesville who yesterday paid a fine of $25 and costs for driving while intoxicated. Arrested Sunday evening by the county sheriff he was fined in the court of Mayor Frank Brian of Hayesville.

Justice R. R. Teeter of Ashland imposed a fine of $5 and costs on Roy E. Cline of Ashland for unsafe driving. He was arrested by Highway Patrolman W. C. Smith.

DRIVER HURT IN TRUCK ACCIDENT

BUCYRUS — Carl Burton, 25, truck driver for an interstate trucking company, suffered an injured shoulder and bruises and cuts when the truck in which he was riding turned over on route 4, near Chatfield, Monday. Burton, who was sleeping in the cab was taken to City hospital and admitted for treatment.

The driver of the truck Frank Koch of St. Louis, was uninjured.

The accident occurred when Koch was unable to stop his vehicle when a truck which he was following stopped for a railroad crossing. A passenger car, following, driven by Don W. Cole, swerved his car to avoid the wreckage and struck a utility pole. Cole escaped injury.

ASHLAND COUNTY FAIR OPENS AT FAIRGROUNDS TOMORROW

ASHLAND — Ashland county fairgrounds already has the appearance of a big county fair although the annual exposition does not begin until tomorrow. The show will continue through Friday.

Concessions, horses, cattle and exhibits began moving in over the week-end and already many concession tents have been erected and horse stalls filled. Already 115 race horses are at the fair and according to James S. Atterholt, fair secretary, it is doubtful if there would be more stalls available.

According to Mr. Atterholt this year's fair promises to be the largest ever, in swine, cattle and sheep exhibits and the horse exhibit will be as large as any, if not larger.

With a full program for each of the three days and premiums offered in 104 classes of nine departments covering every kind of livestock, horticulture, gardening, and home-making, a large attendance can well be expected and a long list of entries.

The best racing program ever featured at an Ashland county fair is offered this year with the Northern Ohio Fair Circuit stakes. Wednesday afternoon there will be the Northern Ohio Fair circuit trot stake with a purse of $600; the 2:18 pace with purse of $300; and the 2:14 trot with a purse of $300.

Thursday afternoon there will be the Northern Ohio Fair circuit pace stake with purse of $600; the 2:19 trot with purse of $300; and the 2:24 pace with purse of $250. Friday there will be the 2:13 pace with purse of $300; the 2:25 trot with purse of $250, and the pace for horses without a record with purse of $200.

An added attraction to each day's racing program will be a race between Gilbert Dodds, Ashland college seminary student who attained national fame as a long distance runner, and Peter-at-Law, former racing horse owned by David Reed and C. P. Gongwer of Ashland.

Cooperating with the fair officials, Mayor Howard S. Lutz of Ashland, has proclaimed Wednesday afternoon a holiday, the opening day of the fair being designated as Ashland day, and Ashland schools and many places of business will close so that Ashlanders may attend the fair.

Likewise Ed L. Smith, mayor of Loudonville, has proclaimed Thursday afternoon a holiday, the second day of the fair being Loudonville day, and Loudonville schools and stores will close on that day. The closing day of the fair, Friday, has been designated as All-County day, and county schools will close Friday afternoon.

CRESTLINE BUYS VILLAGE TRUCK

Council Authorizes Purchase From Local Dealer For $890 Less Allowance.

CRESTLINE—At a meeting of city council Monday evening, Mayor L. F. Waldbauer reported receiving $160.60 in fines and costs.

Four bids were received on a truck which the village is purchasing. One from the Crawford Motor Sales on a ton and a half truck less the trade-in allowance on a 1931 Dodge, was for $940; that of the Crestline Motor Sales, $890; Kroegel and Parsel Garage, $890; and G. L. Rogers of Mansfield, $950.

Council agreed to purchase the truck from Kroegel and Parsel on their bid of $890, less a trade-in allowance of $109. The finance committee was authorized to purchase a dump body for the new truck.

A resolution was adopted transferring $1,500 from the waterworks revenue fund to the waterworks bond and interest retirement fund.

Appropriation of $1,227 received from the auditor of state from gasoline tax was made.

A letter from Emergency Hospital association was read stating that the hospital receives the half mill levy from taxes as allowed in the village budget, the hospital would accept and care for emergency cases from the police station.

Claire Sanar of Patterson street and Joe Tornichio of Bauer avenue requested tile be placed in front of their properties. They agreed to lay the tile if the city would furnish it. This was referred to the sewer committee to investigate. The latter committee also was given power to act in regard to relieving the storm water condition on Park road.

GALION ROTARY, KIWANIS CLUBS HEAR SPEAKER

Address Tells of Uprising In Iraq; Past President Is Honored at Meeting.

GALION—Galion Kiwanis and Rotary clubs held a joint meeting Monday night at Hotel Talbott. The guest speaker was William MacFarquhar, a Galion man, who returned recently from Iraq. He told of his experiences in that country during the pro-Nazi uprising, and of his flight from the country.

Another feature of the meeting was the presentation of a Rotary past president's pin to O. E. Hill, who left this week to begin his work as assistant state director of education. Mr. Hill had just started his regime as president of the Galion Rotary club when his appointment to the state position was made by Governor Bricker. The presentation was made by Rev. W. N. Robertson of the local club.

Three out-of-town members, Mrs. George Woerth and Mrs. Robert Phillips of Mansfield, and Mrs. Charles Quaintance of Bucyrus, were welcomed when Dorothy Volk was hostess to the T. N. T. club Monday evening at her home. The group played pinochle and at the close of the evening were served refreshments.

G. A. R. VET, 100, ATTENDS CONFAB

BUCYRUS — Milton Myers of Park Ridge, Ill., who will observe his 100th birthday next month, left Bucyrus Monday by bus for Columbus to attend the G. A. R. encampment.

The centenarian, who has missed only one encampment, has been visiting in Bucyrus with relatives for the past month. He came to Bucyrus from his home near Chicago alone.

Exceptionally agile and in good health, Mr. Myers lives a regulated life, arising at 7 a. m. and retiring promptly at 8 p. m. He is a former Crawford county resident. He lived in Vernon township during his early childhood.

The AMERICAN FARMER for DEFENSE!

PLOWSHARES ARE SWORDS!*

In the national effort for defense, the health, the strength, the well being of our people, is paramount to our security. The most important essential to our health and well being is food. And it is the task of the American farmer to produce that food.

Today, more than ever, American farmers are depending on the farm equipment industry to supply them with the tools so necessary to produce food and get it to the markets quickly and economically. And, as the supply of farm labor dwindles, the need for farm tools increases.

This company's resources and facilities are geared to the needs of Uncle Sam, and we pledge our fullest co-operation to the Government and the farmer, in building for today's defense requirements. And it is worthy for all in America, the greatest food producing nation, to remember that PLOWSHARES ARE SWORDS.

New Clothes Inspiration Taken From Frontier Days

Each new season of college clothes brings its own theme song. The present collection takes inspiration from early frontier days. This puts the American Indian, the cowboy, the covered wagon, and the engineer plowing over the Santa Fe trail right in the center of every smart college shop. And here's how: Wool frocks have firemen's brass buttons. Vests of black and white pony-skin top blouses worn with flared cow-girl skirts. Yellow and gray plaid Celenese shirts have gray corduroy jumpers with metal overall trappings to hold the suspenders taut.

Belts alone fairly wreak of Rodeos and Indian lore. They are made of pony-skin, calf-skin and various leathers studded with bright stones. Some of them are as much as five inches wide. Some have holsters and others have change purse attached. Jackets, coats, and dresses alike borrow fringed details from Indian dress. A heavy tan alpaca box coat, for example, has its pockets trimmed with green felt fringe. Jumper frocks have suspenders edged with green felt fringe, and with the left-over felt somebdy conceived the idea of making felt Dutch caps with pigtail braids of the braided felt. Amusing, but not to be worn with the fringed dress! a few of the trappings are actually made by the Indians. Moccasins called Rocky Mocs, hand-made of chamois-like skin with flappy tops, look as old as the frontier days and as shaggy as a poodle. Mitts, too, shake their backs like poodle ears, but the newest trick to mitts is in the leather ones with the slit palms. A slash across the palm of the mitt is so made that the air does not get in, but the fingers can be slipped through it for convenience in use.

Boots and Leggings.

The Western ranger, Canadian Mountie and the U. S. Marine must have all whispered a word about leggings into the ears of the stylists. Rumor has it that we'll all be wearing boots this winter from grammar school through business. You take your choice. The fancy ones like the cowboy boots have embossed leather appliques or other ornamentation. Most practical are the plain black, white or colored rubber boots calf-high, sleek and shiny. Leggings reach as high as the knee, in khaki and other colored fabrics, laced up the side. Wool and cotton fancy ribbed stockings are knee-high or cover the knee.

Workman's Clothers.

Maybe girls go to college to work, but according to a recent quiz of the boys, you wouldn't think so. Nevertheless there's a whole collection of college clothes based on the working-man's uniform, which covers the gamut of shoddy-looking slacks to fishing jackets full of zippered pockets for carry-alls. Canvas coats have red stitching and train whistles are anchored inside. Dresses of red Celanese Featherhead have culotte skirts, and skirts of gray flannel are worn with fireman's red flannel jackets. We haven't yet discovered why, but it's said the 1949 Class will embark on the sea of knowledge in men's long white cotton shirts and red cotton bloomers.

Three Honor Miss Adelaide Nichols With Bridge Party

Miss Adelaide Nichols, bride-elect of Russell Porch, is another young woman in the midst of pre-nuptial parties. Her quiet wedding will be solemnized on Sept. 23 at the parsonage of the First Christian church. Last evening Mrs. John Hall, 567 Cline avenue, assisted by Miss Miriam Bean and Miss Mary Elizabeth Miller, entertained for a dessert-bridge party.

Refreshments were served at small tables decorated with appointments in the pastel colors. Later the diversion was in play at three tables with prizes being won by Miss Mildred Keller, Mrs. Helen Spetka, and Miss Nichols.

The guests surprised her with a shower of miscellaneous gifts and the hostesses gave her a wedding gift.

Welcome New Members When Guild Has Meet

Mrs. R. R. Martin, 274 Vennum avenue, assisted by Mrs Wayne Miller, Mrs. Robert Jones, Mrs H. H. Clingan and Mrs. J. J. Swisher entertained members of the Central Methodist church guild at the Martin home Monday evening. Thirty seven members and two guests, Mrs M. R. Kerr and Mrs. C. J. Ganyard, were in attendance.

New members welcomed to the organization were Mrs. H. W. Seckel, Mrs. C. F. Weaver, Mrs Jesse Clark, Mrs. Edith Hill, Mrs. Leo Gilbert, and Mrs. B. T. Warmak. Mrs. Arthur Owen, president, conducted the business session. Mrs. L. F. Rondell was in charge of the devotional program.

Mrs. Leroy Strain, program chairman, outlined the year's program which is based on the theme, "Around the World." Mrs. R. L. Foulke gave a short talk on her trip abroad, comparing it with traveling conditions five years ago and conditions now. Mrs. C. O. Anglin presented several vocal selections. Luncheon was served at the close of the meeting. Mrs. R. K. Clark, South Boulevards, will entertain the guild at her home Oct. 20.

Postcards Ignored By Her Friends

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX.

I'm 22 years old, married over two years, and we are expecting our first baby in a couple of months. A few months ago, my husband got a job in another city and now we have our own home and everything is fine, and we're very happy.

What worries me is my girl friends back home. They were all very dear to me, and we correspond regularly. A short time ago I went home to visit my mother, and a week before I left, I wrote each girl a postcard saying when I'd be home. I thought they'd all come to see me. But only one came. I was terribly disappointed and thought the postcard sufficient notice. Should I have telephoned each one separately? Or does it show that they don't really care for me any more?

PUZZLED

A postcard is rather a casual means of communication. In your place I believe I would have phoned them, after sending the postcard and invited them all in for a little entertainment — iced tea and sandwiches or a fruit punch. When there is no general date set, people are apt to put off calling until it's too late.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Please let me have some correct information as to whether an enlisted man may marry or not. For two years, I've been engaged to a boy who has been drafted and sent to an army post.

Ever since we've been engaged he has begged me to marry him, but I felt we'd be happier if we had something put by. But now circumstances are such that he must marry me. I have never made very much, being an operator in a beauty shop; still I have managed to save a little. But my fiance, who worked in a gasoline station, has never been able to save anything.

I wrote to him that I would be willing to marry him, and felt he should stand by me now. He has written to say that an enlisted man, below the rank of sergeant, may not marry. I wish you would tell me if this is true. If he refuses to be responsible I must know. UNHAPPY

An officer from a nearby post, to whom I referred your question, informed me if a man is a good soldier, he may marry, if his girl is self-supporting, or if he has some income beside his pay. Also he must promise not to ask any special favors because he is married. Then, consent is likely to be given.

If you will send me your personal address, I will write to you further.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

My blood fairly boils when I read all this stuff in the papers about getting girls to dance, sing and play-act for the soldiers, and the leave they're given to visit big cities. Are they supposed to be soldiers or young society men courted by heiresses? My grandfather was in the Civil war; my father in the Spanish-American war, and I never heard that they expected so much fun.

I'm working in a laundry, helping to support my child, and my husband sends me precious little money.

WONDERING WIFE

I've had a good many letters like yours, and I think it would be an excellent idea for ladies who are always asking "What can I do to help?" to put in some of their time, money and energy on soldiers' wives in your position.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

I WAS conscious, as I put the question concerning Ronald to my father, that, in the old wives' phrasecology, I was "speaking two words for myself." I knew how close-mouthed "the Chief" is when he is working on a case, but I hoped that in giving directions for Ronald's activities, he might let slip something of what he had found out from Nancy Carey, from Mary, and from the translation of Mary's letter from the code book.

I revised my mental vocabulary immediately. But he might find it expedient to enlighten Ronald concerning something of what he had learned, and I waited tensely for his reply.

When it came, it was a counter-question.

"How much does Ronald know about this business except for the letter which Marion wrote him?"

"Very little," I returned. "He surmises that Carolyn is involved in some manner, but he has promised me that he will not question Carolyn. He will go with Dicky to escort Carolyn back to Weirhampton this morning, but he wants to leave them at the first railroad station they pass, and come down to New York to aid in the search for Marion."

Ronald "In the Way."

My father frowned.

"He'd only be in the way! He'd much better go back to college and await developments."

"I'm afraid it won't be so easy to get him to agree to that," I said, then hurried on, for my father's frown was portentous now. "You see, he is almost insane for three reasons: Marion's danger, remorse for having misjudged her, and humiliation at his sister's inexplicable acquaintance with one of the gangsters. He told me flatly—and determinedly, that if he could not come down here, he should start off, as soon as he had seen Carolyn safely back to college, on an investigation of his own."

My father's voice hardened.

"The hot-headed young fool!" he said. "You have influence with him Margaret. Can you not persuade him to change his mind?"

"Not a chance," I told him with decision. "Searching for Marion is an 'idee fixe' with him."

"And there isn't time to root it out," my father commented. Then with the swift mobility of mind so characteristic of him, he accepted the situation.

"All right! Tell him to start down here as soon as Richard releases him. Say that he does not need to arouse the suspicions of his parents by asking for money to finance his search. Funds will be provided here. And, as soon as I see him, I will arrange so that his absence from college need not be known to his parents. He can send letters to be forwarded. I gather he has a roommate?"

"Yes," I said, "a harum-scarum, sterling, likable lad named Bob—I really do not believe I ever knew his last name. He was much interested in Carolyn."

Plans For Ronald.

"Bad luck for him," my father commented cynically. "But he'll do to camouflage Ronald's absence from college, forward letters, falsify telephone massages, and things of that sort. As for the college authorities, I will arrange things with them."

I gave him an awed glance. He was so sure of himself, and of the things he could do—and I knew that his power extended to many places which were otherwise impossible to access.

"Ronald is so anxious to know if anything was found out in that code letter," I said hesitantly, and I might have known what his answer would be.

"He will have to wait for all information until he gets here," my father said. "Everything is nebulous as yet, and besides, we must not discuss this over the telephone.

"Make this clear to him," he went on, and then relented a trifle. "Tell him the little book—do not refer to it as 'code'—gave me some valuable clues, and that I am much encouraged. But do not elaborate. Make your message as concise as possible."

Good Grooming Important for Career Woman

By MAX FACTOR, Jr.
Famous Hollywood Make-Up Specialist Writing for International News Service

HOLLYWOOD —(INS)— Many working girls who are highly efficient in their daily tasks in the business world are not at all efficient in the personal grooming which is a necessary every-morning prelude to going to work.

In some girls this lack of grooming efficiency is apparently in a noticeable lack of perfection in the details of the appearance which they present when they arrive at the scene of their daily activities.

In others, this efficiency lack is not at all discernable in the appearance. With the women who came under this heading, the penalty is one imposed upon their own time and comfort, rather than their grooming effect: they accomplish perfection in appearance, but only at a cost of more effort than is efficiently necessary. Because they haven't learned how to conduct their early morning grooming in a systematic efficient manner, they inflict upon themselves an uproarious, rather than tranquil, period of early morning living.

Hollywood's film stars offer us a very convincing demonstration of the need for system and efficiency in the grooming which proceeds going to work in the morning. These actresses report at the studio at a much earlier hour than the average girl does to her office. Consequently, every minute of preparatory effort must be made to count.

The following is a condensed outline of the preliminary grooming routine usually followed by a film actress before her work day begins:

On these work days, the shower is made the first grooming step after arising. Tub baths, which naturally take more time than showering, are usually reserved for the evening, when the time demands are not so pressing.

Following the shower, come such necessities as brushing the teeth and bathing the eyes. Don't overlook this latter practice. A quick administration of eye wash can add a great deal of attractive sparkle to the eyes and this is a factor which Hollywood's stars place a proper and appreciative value upon.

Then comes the creation of make-up. Allow yourself an abundance of time for this process. Experiment and determine how long it takes you to create your make-up, fully and perfectly, and then always allow yourself that same amount of time as a minimum. Don't sacrifice make-up artistry and excellence to speed.

After doing your hair and then dressing, take time to guard and soften the skin of your hands with hand lotion. Many an otherwise perfect appearance has been appreciably detracted from by hands which look rough, and somehow grimy, no matter how clean they actually are.

Thumbing Rides May Be Harmful

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

A few years ago in this column I condemned hitch-hiking. One of the strongest objectors to that article was a college student who wrote me that except for thumbing rides he would not be able to get a college education.

In my reply to him I asked, "What of it? Do you suppose any youth has the right to make of himself a public nuisance, in order to go to college?" I might have reminded him of the college lad who, as reported in the papers about that time, decided he should hold up a gas station "in order to go on to college."

Likes Company.

In another letter a traveling salesman assured me he gained a great deal of profitable enjoyment from the company of the hitch-hikers he picked up. He objected that I should suggest denying him this pleasure. He seemed not to consider the inconvenience and annoyance imposed by hitch-hikers on other travelers.

If hitch-hiking is a desirable practice, why have 21 states prohibited it by law?

You may have read a recent magazine article, "He Thumbed His Way Through College," and gained the impression, as I did, that the writer was trying to make a strong case for hitch-hiking, by applauding the lad who has paid most of his way through college by selling a system of hitch-hiking to other college students.

Some Parents Approve.

What makes hitch-hiking so serious a problem is the fact that many parents of influence and affluence look upon hitch-hiking by their sons as a laudable means of exercising self-reliance and thrift. I have heard preachers and college professors tell with great pride about the son who hitch-hikes to and from college.

Some parents brag of their high school son and his pal who thumb their way across the continent which can hardly be done without violating some state law. I concede that these ride-begging youths do get experience and training in self-reliance. Have not most inmates of reformatories and penitentiaries acquired considerable first-hand experience and self-reliance through criminal actions? But that's hardly the kind of experience and self-reliance one would hold up for ideal growth in character and citizenship.

Sets Up False Values.

When I buy from your child something I don't want—say a toy gun he has made—just because he is your child, and you and I are friends and neighbors, I do your child a moral harm, no doubt. I help him gain false values. If my son, preying on your sympathies, induces you to stop your car and take him in, probably holding up and endangering the cars behind you, you would be helping my son gain untrue values. If I approved my son's imposing on your good nature and the rights of other motorists, I would encourage him in committing a public nuisance, and in the states with anti-hitch-hiking laws, encourage him in deliberate violation of these laws.

I may be wrong, but as I see it, the issue is clear. As a parent, I cannot defend hitch-hiking. I owe it to my son and society to bring him up not to be a hitch-hiker.

Please let me add, however, that I am not condemning the motives of parents who approve or encourage hitch-hiking, nor the youths who as laborers, caddies, or college lads find a way to get along. They probably have not considered it a public wrong at all. If, as it appears to me, they weighed the matter broadly, I believe they would.

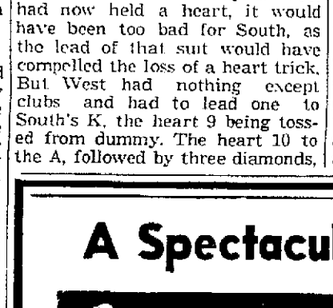
ESTIMATE THE LENGTH

SUCCESS IN the play of a difficult contract can depend sometimes upon your making a correct estimate of the length of some suit bid by one of your opponents. It may indicate to you that his partner has only one card of it, or perhaps none, and consequently may point the way to some type of end play.



(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	2 ♥
3 ♣	Dbl	3 ♠	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	5 ♠	Pass
6 ♠	Dbl

Against this West led his club 5, and South saw that he was up against a tough job, with West surely holding at least four trumps and probably a half dozen clubs. With so little honor strength out, he reckoned that East would not have made his vulnerable overcall in hearts at the range of two with only a six-card suit, and that therefore he probably held seven, with West blank. If that was the case, the diamonds would be evenly divided.

Basing his entire plan upon that premise, he overtook East's club 10 with the A, laid down the spade A and Q and the diamond A, then led to the spade K.

Next he laid down the diamond K, discarding the heart 3, and led the diamond 8, covered by the J and ruffed with the spade 6. When West had to follow suit on that third diamond trick, South felt certain his card reading had been correct. He therefore led the spade 9 to the J of West, discarding the Heart 8 from the dummy. If West had now held a heart, it would have been too bad for South, as the lead of that suit would have compelled the loss of a heart trick. But West had nothing except clubs and had to lead one to South's K, the heart 9 being tossed from dummy. The heart 10 to the A, followed by three diamonds, then completed a contract which this writer was happy to make.

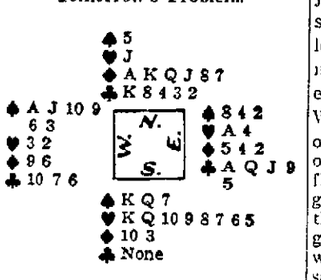
Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: East. Neither side vulnerable.)

If East bids 1-Club, South 4-Hearts, West 4-Spades, North 5-Diamonds, East doubles, South 5-Hearts and East doubles that, what unusual principle of defense should govern Wests's lead?

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, Sept. 17.
By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

SURPRISING and definite progress, with unexpected advancement in the direction of cherished objectives and possessions, may be read from the very interesting chain of planetary configurations. Such achievement may demand the use of unusual resources, bold tactics, even revolutionary and audacious programs and campaigns, rather than strict adherence to routine or conventional methods. "Dare to do" is a slogan to inspire brave moves on major objectives, but with sufficient logical and mental restraints with regard for the New Order. Large corporations rather than individual support with public or community interest is desirable. In private, social or romantic affairs be circumspect and prudent.

If It Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of dramatic advancement upon cherished goals, with bold strokes of initiative, innovation or unusual resourcefulness and originality being determining factors for success. Coups or daring to swing radically away from old concepts, methods and programs may be helpful in enlisting group or public endorsement while private individuals may hesitate. Strategy rather than force are enjoined. In intimate relations use tact and discretion and conserve the funds and energies. Use creative talents and ideals.

A child born on this day should be endowed with much originality and creative genius. It may be public-spirited and progressive but rather vainglorious in its personal conquests, also extravagant and showy.

Get In Swim Girls If You Would Be Slim

By MME. QUI VIVE

It isn't so long ago that the majority of girls were beach paraders, scarcely got their toes wet. Now look at 'em! Merry mermaids, doing dives and flipflops. It is an encouraging sign of the times. What would our ancient and honorable foremothers have thought of such activities. They wore long flannel pantaloons and full long gowns. When they ducked under the dear creatures were water logged and sank to the bottom. No wonder they couldn't swim; the sartorial cargo was too heavy.

If you are fat or if you are thin, get in the swim. It is the ideal exercise, affords the best of fun. It does not overwork the muscles that we use all the time, and it rouses fibers that are laggards, go scot free from work. It strengthens muscles that have softened, it works off fat cells for which we have no use whatsoever. More than any other moderate exercise it brings proportions to normal. It is a help to the flyweights, the heavyweights and those that are betwixt-and-between.

If you have not learned to swim, make a vow this summer that you will. Physical education is a good thing, and swimming should appeal even to the laggards.

When the arms are extended to cut through the water there is a pull on all the muscles extending from the shoulder blades to the hips. These fibers are the ones that make for good posture. Will the round-shouldered baby pleace take notice? The forward slump is often due to weakness of the muscles of the back. Make these fibers strong, hold up the chest, keep the tummy flat and good carriage will be as natural as breathing.

Swimming creates a free movement of the hip joints, which is a help to the woman who does not walk gracefully, or who has been slack on exercise. If you are an office worker, subject to what are called chair disfigurements of the anatomy, swimming is precisely what you need. It acts favorably upon the mid-section, which can always do with more exercise than it gets in the course of the day's activities.

Undeveloped girls will be interested to know that swimming improves the respiratory machine, creates a chest that follows a policy of expansion and has an upbuilding effect upon the breasts. It is fashionable to be normally busty. Form-fitting bodices demand a good frontage.

Immersion without exercise is of no benefit either to health or good looks, so don't be a beach loafer. Duck in, plough through the waves. There will be a quick reaction, a consciousness of energy and exhilleration.

Sport Podge

by REX HESS

The rules said they couldn't play, so quite a few high school grid teams hereabouts practiced strenuously against each other during the week-end just passed.

It was all off-the-record, but some of them kept score in a sub-rosa sort of way. Which might not have been entirely cricket. But it was football.

Of chief interest here in Mansfield, of course, was the 12 to 0 defeat plastered on Galion by Madison's Rams, who once more are plunging and butting and throwing their horns around.

Mt. Vernon was very happy as the Yellow Jackets swamped an alumni aggregation 27-0, and Spiv Harris, sports editor of the Mt. Vernon News, sends word that the Jackets have their best team since 1937. So watch out, you N. C. O. leaguers.

Cheers go fourth and spirits mount But all those touchdowns didn't count.

Marion and Fostoria really engaged in a practice scrimmage, and neither is embarrassed today by the outcome. The teams took turns in 15-minute offensive and defensive maneuvers, and the 22-0 score chalked up by Marion meant nothing. But Coach Bill Williams of the Harding squad was happy. "The boys looked good," he said. "They were in condition and looked like they could have played another game."

Very unhappy were the Mt. Gileads, who bowed before an alumni eleven, 19 to 6.

Other rules on fall limits for high school football practice were brought up for debate recently when officials of the Canton McKinley athletic department visited state athletic Commissioner H. R. Townsend and demanded:

"How about these Massillons having a football training camp before the time permitted for football practice?"

But the Massillons insisted that no football was practiced, that the boys were just being whipped into condition.

"We didn't file any protest," the Cantons will have you know. But wouldn't they have been happy if Townsend had made some ruling against their old rivals!

It appears that the rules are made to be cracked, but not broken.

Just wait until you hear the crying next fall when the rule goes into effect limiting high school football schedules to eight games.

It will take just as much money to outfit grid squads, with most schools having two or three less games in which to raise the money. And the other scholastic sports that have been depending on football for financial support will suffer accordingly.

BULLS BEGIN DEFENSE OF PRO FOOTBALL TITLE

MILWAUKEE —(AP)— Displaying touchdown dynamite late in the game, the Columbus bulls began the defense of their American Professional football league championship Sunday with a 34-7 victory over the Milwaukee Chiefs.

The Bulls scored a touchdown in the first period on a pass play and added 28 points on four touchdowns in six minutes of the fourth

Dodgers Win In 17 Innings

Allen and Derringer Turn In Masterpiece.

CINCINNATI — (AP) — Sizzling pennant-ward with 11 victories in its last 15 games, Brooklyn aimed today to end season relationships with Cincinnati by making a clean sweep of the three-game series.

Pete Reiser homered in the gloaming to break a scoreless tie in the 17th inning of a four-hour-three-minute struggle yesterday, and the Dodgers' 5-1 victory mathematically eliminated the champions and pushed them into a third-place tie with Pittsburgh.

Luke Hamlin—sidetracked yesterday for Johnny Allen—was the probable Dodger hurler against Elmer Riddle.

Big, 36-year-old Allen and bigger Paul Derringer, lacking a month of 35, locked in a titanic pitching duel before the shades of night burlesqued the goose-egg battle with six runs in the final frame.

Allen, who won nine and lost eight for Cleveland last year, was touched for only six hits before a runner replaced him in the 16th.

Derringer was taken out in the 17th after Reiser pasted his 13th homer into rightfield stands and Dolph Camilli and Lou Riggs singled. Until then the big Kentuckian scattered a dozen hits and four walks, showing all the greatness that made him a 20-game winner the last three seasons.

Errors by Zientara and Dick West followed the homer and singles, a run scoring. Mickey Owen singled two more over and Jim Turner wild-pitched another in. Billy Herman purposely cut at one two feet wide for the third out.

The Redlegs came to bat with the park so dark that outfielders couldn't be seen from the press box. Manager Bill McKechnie protested players would be injured, but the umpires decided to see it through—a decision McKechnie indicated dejectedly last night would not be protested.

The Dodgers now are two games out in front of the St. Louis Cardinals.

The Dodgers have one more game in Cincinnati today and two in Pittsburgh, after which they will return to the east for nine appearances against the hapless Phillies and Boston Braves while the Cards play the Cubs and the Pirates. It would be senseless to discount the advantage Brooklyn has in playing its final contests with the seventh and eighth-place teams of the league.

The game at Cincinnati, which reduced the Reds to a one-percentage point hold on third place, was the only action in the National league.

In the American league the New York Yankees were outhit, 9-6, but beat the Cleveland Indians, 4-2, for Lefty Gomez's 15th triumph.

The Boston Red Sox belted the Chicago White Sox, 6-1. The St. Louis Browns toppled the Philadelphia Athletics, 4-3, and the Washington Senators defeated Detroit, 8-5.

Erie Tucks Away Playoff Title

ERIE, Pa.—(AP)—The Erie Sailors, whose late-season drive carried them within two and one-half games of a pennant, tucked away the Mid-Atlantic League's Shaughnessy playoff title today.

* * *

Behind the very effective pitching of Ted Maillet, youthful southpaw, the Tars won their fourth game in five starts against the Canton Terriers last night, 4 to 3. A crowd of 3,875 looked on.

Erie advanced to the final series by drubbing Springfield three straight in the preliminaries, while Canton was disposing of the flag-winning Akron Yankees.

SPEEDBOAT RECORD SET

CINCINNATI—(INS)—An unofficial world speedboat record of 99.8 miles an hour was posted today by "Wild Bill" Cantrell, of Louisville, Ky., who won the featured mile dash of the Ohio Valley Motorboat Racing association's 23rd annual regatta.

MANSFIELDER WINS BUT LOSES SHOOT TROPHY

A Mansfielder, J. Hunter, shot a perfect 400 score Sunday in the Crawford county Rifle and Pistol association's annual small-bore tournament—but he didn't get the gold trophy.

Club officials ruled the trophy is not to leave the county and it was given to Clem Pfleiderer who was second with 398.

Tygers Drill Pass Defense

Prepare For Opener With Akron West High.

Preparing for the opening game of the season Friday night at Stadium field with Akron West High, Coach Paul Snyder yesterday said this week's practice of the Mansfield Tygers wouldn't vary a great deal from that of the past two weeks which has been restricted to conditioning, practice in the fundamentals of blocking and tackling, and brushing up on plays in which the squad was drilled last spring.

"We'll give special attention this week to pass defense," said Snyder, "but aside from that we'll go along much as we have been."

"Much as we have been," meant that the Tygers were immediately put through long gruelling drills in blocking, charging and tackling until finally the boys were glad to hear the word that sent them into the less strenuous practice of battling down passes and rushing the passer.

Snyder is preparing two backfield combinations for the opener. In each Elroy Lightnin' Jones will be at wingback and Adam Brandt at fullback. In one Bill Doolittle will be at blocking back with either Chuck Condon or Ken Krupp at tailback, while in the other Doolittle moves to tailback with John Butler at blocking back.

Butler, who has been looking good at the blocking job, would add from eight to 15 pounds to the Mansfield backfield.

Meanwhile the Tygers know little or nothing about their opponents aside from what they learned in a one-point victory over Akron West last fall. Coach Vern Hoffman's efforts to obtain names, numbers and weights from West for use in the game program have met with silence thus far.

* * *

But the Tygers are expecting just as hard a battle from West as they got last year, and are going about their practice drills with that thought in mind.

TICKETS ON SALE.

Season tickets for Mansfield High football games at home this season are still available, and high school athletic officials pointed out today that the only way fans may be certain of a reserved seat for the big games this fall is through the purchase of the season books. They are on sale downtown at Tawse's pharmacy, Athletic Supply, Yuncker Sports store, Mayer drug store, Brown drug store, Fox jewelry store, and Central drug store.

Tribe To Pay Doctor's Bill

Home Office To Repair Harder's Ailing Arm.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—The Cleveland Indians' home office, whose ball players are idle today and on the way to Boston, let it be known that the surgeon's bill for the repair of Mel Harder's ailing arm will be paid by the club.

Vice President C. C. Slapnicka, having just paid off four players for the season, said concerning Harder, "We intend to pay for the operation and for any treatments that may be necessary."

And if the removal of a bone chip from Harder's elbow results in bringing the veteran flinger's arm back into condition, the Tribe would like to have Mel back again, though it recently gave him an unconditional release after 14 years.

The check issued to Roy Weatherly was minus the $100 which Manager Roger Peckinpaugh fined him Saturday in Washington, when Peck put him under indefinite suspension for the second time this season for failing to hustle. Final checks of the season went also to Rollie Hemsley, Clint Brown and Joe Heving. President Alva Bradley said their early departure did not necessarily mean they were through with the Indians.

BOB LEHMAN WINS SHELBY GOLF TITLE

SHELBY—Bob Lehman, former Shelby high school cage star, is the winner of the annual President's Cup golf tournament at the Shelby Country club. Lehman defeated Lewis Brucker, jr., for the club championship.

In the second flight Harry Smith defeated Clifford Maxwell, and Carl Daugherty defeated Ernest Brunk in the third flight championship.

Governor Rolls First Ball

Lester Raby, Mansfield Moose lodge governor, opened the Moose bowling season last night in fitting fashion by rolling the first ball at the Colony alleys. At least it looks fitting from this angle, but at the other end of the alley only the seven pin dropped.

* * * * *

Hilborn Rolls 242 Game As Moose League Opens

Art Hilborn, only Mansfield kegler to roll a 300 score last season, was in there sharp-shooting again last night as the Moose league got under way for the 1941-42 campaign at the Colony alleys.

Art took high game honors with 242 and high match score with 183-189-242—614.

He paced the Governors to high team total with 874-817-853—2,544.

The league opened its season with appropriate ceremonies which included the rolling of the first ball by Lodge Governor Lester Raby.

Crestline Depends On Vets To Improve Gridiron Record

CRESTLINE — After dropping all but two of their eight games scheduled last year, Crestline's football warriors are looking forward this season to what Coach Merle A. Hutson terms "neither the best nor worst" of his coaching career.

Veterans, always a big factor in high school football, give Hutson's club a better than average early season rating.

Of his last year's first stringers, seven are returning including three backs and four linesmen.

Both line flanks will be guarded by veterans as Art Simmerlacher and Richard Dickinson return after winning letters there last year.

Ray Light, Jack Barlion and Oliver Sigars, veteran backs, along with Guard Bart Anatra and Tackle Dick Shealey round out the list of the experienced players.

Assuming that all of the vets salt down positions on the first string, Hutson will still have to fill the center, a tackle and a back spot with four of the 34 boys who have turned out for practice.

Practice started Sept. 2 with 24 candidates and the squad increased by 10 when school opened Sept. 8.

Hutson estimated that most of the boys who would win letters this year with the exception of the vets will be juniors available for another year of football.

* * *

Of all the Mansfield area coaches, Hutson has had probably the most varied record for the past two years.

His 1939 edition trampled eight straight opponents without a loss, but last year his squad picked up only two wins.

Crestline's 1941 schedule is:
Sept. 19, Mt. Gilead
Sept. 26, Galion
Oct. 4, Marion St. Mary's
Oct. 10, at Upper Sandusky
Oct. 17, Tiffin Calvert
Oct. 25, at Shelby
Oct. 31, at Willard
Nov. 7, Fremont St. Joseph's
Nov. 14, at Bellevue.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK — (The Special News Service)—Tip-off on the pennant race is that when the Dodgers started accepting world series reservations yesterday, the Cardinals still were turning them down in spite of a rush that developed after Sunday's double-header victory. . . . Judging from yesterday, it looks like the Cards are the sprinters and The Bums the ones to go the long route and finish like Whirlaway. . . . The fans are beginning to get a little sour on the daily battles with the umpires, though. . . . Which reminds us of the recent comment from Thomas Jefferson Hickey, ex-president of the American association. Hickey said he couldn't pull for the Dodgers because he couldn't forget the headaches Larry MacPhail gave him in Columbus.

Private Andy Neidnig, intercollegiate two-mile record holder, who was inducted recently at Camp Upton, N. Y., runs two or three miles around camp after supper every night and hopes to continue in competition this winter. . . . The boys up at Pine Camp, N. Y., had some expert refereeing for their boxing show the other night. . . . Lou Ambers handled the job.

ODDS, AND SOME ENDS.

The winner of the Dapper Dan club's contest to decide which fight should have the top spot on last night's card at Pittsburgh was Mrs. Betty Runyan, who never had seen a pro fight. . . . For the first time in 14 years the Indians are making an eastern swing without a troupe of newspapermen in attendance. . . . Andy Simpson, one-armed golf pro at Lake Lackawanna, N. J., has equalled par 64 for the course and has a flock of 67's and 68's.

LAST LAUGH.

During the Harrisburg (Pa.) round-robin baseball tournament, an exasperated fan shouted to the umpires: "I know now why they call this the round robin series; the teams play all around the district and you guys do the robbin'."

Mansfield Keglers Organize

Bowling Leagues Ready For Early Pin-Smashing.

THE Mansfield bowling season is really getting in full swing with the organization of 10 more leagues for early action.

Two Mansfield teams, Liederkranz and Bissman's, were included in the N. C. O. traveling league formed Sunday at Bellevue for a 28-week season.

Bellevue meets Bissman's this Sunday at the Colony alleys while Liederkranz travels to Bucyrus to meet Songer's Restaurant.

The 16-team league includes two teams from Bucyrus, two from Fostoria, two from Sandusky, two from Port Clinton, and one each from Ashland, Fremont, Bellevue, Norwalk, Elyria and Lorain. The league has been in operation 11 years.

Last night the 12-team Moose league got under way at the Colony alleys but after this week the league will roll on Friday nights and the Monday night spot will be taken by the Club league which starts next week with 12 teams.

The C league also starts next Monday night. Dominion Electric league with four teams opens its season this Friday night.

Also organized and ready to go are the Humphreys league on Thursday night with six men's teams and two women's teams, the Tappan league, starting tonight with 12 teams, the mixed doubles league opening next Tuesday, the ladies league increased to 10 teams and opening Sept. 25, and the B league with 10 teams starting Sept. 25.

* * *

Organizing this week are the Westinghouse and Mansfield Tire leagues.

Efforts are being made to organize high school league for both boys and girls under A. B. C. rules.

Turnout Ends Coach's Pain

As 21 Players Report. Marietta Mentor Relieved

(By Associated Press)

Bad dreams haunted Coach Frank (Duke) Hayes down at Marietta college last week. Draft . . . Defense jobs . . . no material. He even talked about using Freshmen on the varsity, or cancelling the season's full schedule.

Hayes smiled today. Broadly. Twenty-one players showed up for practice yesterday and the Duke said promptly, "Prospects excellent," and went to work getting ready for the opener with Georgetown, (Ky.) Sept. 26.

Coach George Gauthier of Ohio Wesleyan started a search for backs to round out his ball-carryings corps. Bill Watkins, 135-pound Delaware prospect, has been installed as first string quarterback, and Gauthier wants to finish up with heavier material.

Bob Brentlinger, Lima Sophomore, and Ralph Copp, Dayton Junior, looked like the best of the heavyweight runners, Gauthier said. The Bishops open against Albion (Mich.) at Delaware Sept. 27.

* * *

Coach Harry Geltz had only 19 candidates on hand as he prepared for Mount Union's inaugural with Hiram Friday night, but all of the players are comparative veterans and Geltz isn't so blue.

CALL FIGHT DRAW WHEN SOOSE'S EYE CLOSED

LOS ANGELES —(AP)— Middleweight Champion Billy Soose prepared to head east today, his crown slightly on the tarnished side after one of the most vicious fights with the most unsatisfactory endings witnessed in Los Angeles in years.

Handsome Billy's 12-round non-title fight with Veteran Ceferino Garcia was stopped midway in the eighth round and called a draw because Soose's left eye was badly cut.

Simpson Has Two Veterans

But New Material Shows Promise of Good Team.

If you were the coach of a football team and had just two regulars back from last year's outfit, would you be downhearted?

That's the situation with Coach Bob DeHaven at John Simpson junior high, but he's just as happy as though he had good football players.

"Some of the new material looks promising," says DeHaven, "and I'm already getting some idea of how the team is going to shape up."

* * *

The returning regulars from last year's city championship Simpson eleven are both halfbacks, Roland Schmidt and Mike Zivkoff.

Among the more promising backs at the moment are Jim Voyik, Dominic Musille, George Thomas, Oliver Cline, a big 7th-grader from Hedges, Jim Hahn and Bill Dent.

DeHaven is attempting to line up games with Belleville, Madison, Shelby, Galion and Butler, and of course he has the big game of the season with Johnny Appleseed which will be either late in October or early in November.

WEATHERMAN PITCHES RAIN, HALTS PLAYOFFS

(By Associated Press)

With the weatherman pitching nothing but rain for three days, it looked today like the only way Louisville and Minneapolis could decide the winner in their half of the American Association playoffs would be to flip a coin.

Rain forced postponement of the fourth Louisville-Minneapolis game Saturday and Sunday, repeated again last night and threatens to do so again today. Louisville needs but another victory to go into the playoff finals with Columbus.

Hallabrin Forced to Sidelines

Injury Jinx Continues To Plague Mansfielder.

By DON SMITH

COLUMBUS—(U.P.)—Johnny Hallabrin, Ohio State quarterback from Mansfield, sat on the sidelines yesterday as the Buckeyes worked out and gritted his teeth.

The Mansfield senior, who bolts from the close-up quarterback spot like a rifle shot, was on the sidelines because of a painful rib bruise and he gritted his teeth because he was watching someone else playing in the first team line-up at the position he worked so hard to win during spring practice.

Hallabrin was outwardly peeved at the fates for getting injured at this stage of the game without only 11 days remaining before the opening kickoff against Missouri.

Hallabrin received the side injury Friday and has been cooling his restless heels on the sidelines since. Trainer Tucker Smith said today that Hallabrin may be idle for a day, two days or the rest of the week, such is the nature of the injury.

"I guess there just isn't any justice," Hallabrin said. "I worked out daily for six weeks before practice started and was in great condition when practice started last week.

"I reported at 190, my regular playing weight, and now I'm up to 195 already. At the beginning of spring practice I was on the second team but worked up to the first team by the time of the spring game.

"Now, with only a few days before we open up, I have to go and get hurt and start working for a varsity spot all over again. I could kick myself every time I think of it."

During his sophomore and junior year, the former Mansfield high school star played in the shadow of Jimmy Langhurst but with Langhurst gone, Hallabrin should be one of the standouts in the Buckeye backfield in his final year.

George Lynn, Niles, O., sophomore, was at Hallabrin's post yesterday as the Buckeyes opened their second week of practice with a tough 45-minute scrimmage devoted to polishing up on pass plays.

The Bucks are showing definite improvement as the result of the brutal contact work they have been undergoing since the opening session. Their blocking and tackling is surer, more resounding and crisper, as Coach Brown readily agreed after yesterday's workout.

Paul Sarringhaus, Hamilton, O., sophomore, troubled by faulty vision, experimented with a new pair of contact lenses during the scrimmage and reported "they felt swell."

U. S., CANADA WORK TOGETHER AS ARSENAL

Exchange of Defense Items Made Possible By King, Roosevelt Agreement.

(By S. N. S.)

Ottawa, Canada, which a year ago was exerting itself to become an arsenal of empire for Britain, has in recent months become also an integral part of the United States' arsenal of democracy.

Her factories today are producing implements of war not only for the United Kingdom, South Africa, Australia, New Zealand and India, but also for China, the Netherlands East Indies and Russia.

What makes is possible is the Hyde Park agreement announced by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister W. L. MacKenzie King a little over four months ago.

Under the terms of this agreement the United States buys from Canada various defense items which can be conveniently produced in this country, and on the other hand supplies to Canada under lease-lend terms airplane engines, armor plate and other component parts of equipment which Canada is making for England.

At the time of the Hyde Park agreement it was announced the United States probably would be able to buy between $200,000,000 and $300,000,000 worth of defense articles from Canada in the succeeding 12 months. Actually much more than that already has been purchased.

The sum total of lease-lend parts supplied by the United States to Canada is limited only by the capacity of Canadian factories for putting these parts together and sending them to England as finished articles. Canada thus can throw her war industry into high gear without worrying about how to pay for imported American airplane engines, electrical equipment, metals and other essential components of planes, tanks, guns and vehicles being manufactured here for England.

On the other hand, Canadian factories are enabled to share in the defense orders being distributed from Washington as part of the general program of producing weapons for all countries resisting aggression.

Thus a Canadian factory which heretofore had been making hurricane fighters for Britain now is busy on a United States order for 400 planes said to be destined for the Netherlands East Indies and China.

The advantage of orders coming from the United States is that articles delivered to the United States are paid for in dollars which can be used to pay for Canada's large imports from that country. Britain's payments in sterling for Canadian food and war material shipments, on the other hand, can be used only for purchase of British goods, repatriation of Canadian securities held in England, or accumulation of sterling balances in England.

Prior to the Hyde Park agreement Canada was exporting enough to the United Kingdom to pay for everything she could import from there, including large amounts of British-held Canadian securities; but she was having difficulty digging up enough United States dollars to pay for her rapidly mounting imports from the United States.

Now that the United States is buying heavily in Canada for its own defense needs and for shipments to countries such as China, and is lease-lending component parts to England via Canadian factories instead of selling them to Canada, the strain on Canada's finances is greatly diminished.

But not everyone is satisfied yet. One complaint here is that obtaining lease-lend parts from the United States involves too much red tape, that it frequently is necessary to buy component parts wherever they can be had quickly for cash, instead of risking delay by waiting for lease-lend deliveries.

Another complaint is that many defense orders in the United States are concentrated in already overburdened factories when part of them might easily be farmed out to Canadian factories.

However, this complaint is not in harmony with the latest statement of the department of munitions and supply, which pictured Canadian factories as facing such a huge program of war production that many of them now making articles for civilian consumption would be compelled by government rationing of raw materials to fit themselves into the more vital job of making implements of war.

Mansfielders To See Themselves In Movies Tomorrow

Mansfielders will have the opportunity to see themselves in the movies when "Mansfield in Reelife" is presented as a feature production at the Madison Wednesday and Thursday.

Last week photographers of the Reelife company were in the city taking pictures of men, women and children in all walks of life.

Social functions were visited, meetings of civic groups and also business and professional people were snapped by Kay McWilliams, photographer, as Mansfielders went about their daily tasks.

Thousands of residents are included in the full length feature, which will be in natural color. A commentator will guide the moviegoer on this film tour of the city.

THEATERS

Music and Mystery

"Hold That Ghost," will be held over at the Ohio theater on Wednesday. Bud Abbott and Lou Costello, who made such a hit in "Buck Privates," are starred in this production. Playing in support of the stellar comics are Richard Carlson, Joan Davis, Mischa Auer, The Andrews Sisters and Ted Lewis and his orchestra. The story opens in a night club where Lewis and the Andrews Sisters are entertaining and where Lou and Bud get jobs as waiters.

See Mansfielders

Showing at the Madison on Wednesday and Thursday will be "Mansfield in Reelife," filmed in natural color. These pictures, of Mansfield people in all walks of life, show many phases of social and business activity here. Cofeature will be "The Parson of Panamint," starring Charlie Ruggles, Ellen Drew and Philip Terry. The plot is taken from the Peter B. Kyne story, recalling the glory of the old West, with its goldrush saints and sinners.

Chinese Mystery

The Ritz theater presents "Phantom of Chinatown" for Tuesday and Wednesday. It is a thrilling murder mystery, the solution of which centers around a clue offered by a telephone operator on the Chinese switchboard. Lotus Long, Eurasian actress, plays opposite Keye Luke in this feature. The story is based on a magazine detective story by Hugh Wiley. Second attraction is "The Getaway," also an adventure story, with Robert Sterling and Donna Reed.

Mickey and Judy

"Strike Up the Band," featuring Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland with music and excitement furnished by Paul Whiteman and his orchestra is the headline attraction at the Majestic Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. June Preisser and William Tracy are also seen in this lively story with Mickey in hot water as usual. Cofeature is "Pastor Hall," with Wilfrid Lawson and Nova Pilbeam in the starring roles.

Underground Activities

"Roar of the Press," action drama at the Park, deals with "underground" activities of the Fifth Column groups which menace the nation's unity. Wallace Ford, a reporter, follows a trail of murder and violence which leads him to the secret headquarters of an organization which styles itself "Guard America." Second on the bill is "Doctor's Won't Tell," with Douglas Fowley, Edward Norris and John Beal in a dramatic story.

DIRECTION OF STOCK MARKET REMAINS HAZY

Wall Street Stays Calm In Face of "Sink-Seize" Order on Raiders.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—The stock market shifted over an irregular terrain today with small price variations visible in virtually all departments.

Efforts to negotiate a definite trend were unsuccessful at the start and, near the second hour, the direction still was notably hazy. Dealings remained sluggish.

While Wall Street maintained its calmness in the face of the inauguration today of the "sink-or-seize" decree for Axis raiders in the Atlantic, the speculative urge apparently was restrained by the desire to await developments. There was little change in the business picture.

The federal reserve board disclosed that member banks in 101 cities during the week ended Sept. 10 boosted their commercial, industrial and agricultural loans $88,000,000 with principal upturns being registered by banks in the interior. The jump in the loans item was attributed mainly to borrowing for defense work.

RULES AND REGULATIONS

Of the Mansfield Board of Health to Protect the Health, Welfare, and Safety of the People of Mansfield by Regulating and Governing Plumbing.

Be it resolved by the Board of Health of the City of Mansfield that the following rules and regulations governing plumbers and the installation and inspection of plumbing be and are hereby adopted.

Part I. BASIC PRINCIPLES

Section I. Definitions.

(A) Master Plumber: A master plumber is any person skilled in the planning, superintending and the practical installation of plumbing, and who is familiar with the laws, rules and regulations governing the same.

(B) Journeyman Plumber: A journeyman plumber is any person other than a master plumber who, as his principal occupation, is engaged in the practical installation of plumbing in the employ or under the supervision of a master plumber.

(C) Plumber's Apprentice: A plumber's apprentice is any person other than a journeyman plumber or a master plumber who, as his principal occupation, is engaged in learning and assisting in the installation of plumbing and drainage under the direct supervision of a master or journeyman plumber.

Section II. Water Supply.

(A) All premises intended for human habitation or occupancy shall be provided with a supply of safe water.

(B) Buildings in which water closets and other plumbing fixtures exist shall be provided with a supply of water adequate in volume and pressure for flushing purposes.

(B-a)—Provided that water service pipes from the curb to the building shall not be less than ¾" inside diameter, not less than ¾" inside diameter for the main building supply, and all branch lines to be not less than ½" inside diameter.

(C) A public water supply distributing system furnishing water for drinking or domestic purposes shall not be connected with the distributing system of any other water supply.

Section III. Cross Connections on Drainage and Water: No plumbing fixture, device or construction shall be installed which will provide a cross connection between a distributing system of water for drinking purposes and a drainage system, soil or waste pipe, so as to permit or make possible the back flow of sewage or waste into the water supply system either by gravity or siphonage.

Section III. (A) All fixtures hereafter installed or replaced shall have an over-the rim supply with at least ½" air gap above the rim of the fixture or be provided with an approved siphon or vacuum breaker.

Section IV. Hot Water Tanks and Heaters: Every hot water supply tank hereafter installed, replaced or relocated shall be provided with an approved pressure and temperature relief valve. Every gas water heater hereafter installed, replaced or relocated shall be provided with a vent flue connected to a flue or chimney.

Section V. (A) Detailed Rules and Regulations: Section 12600-137 to 12600-273 inclusive and any subsequent amendments thereto of the General Code of Ohio, the same being a portion of said General Code of Ohio covering sanitation, and/or any rules and regulations governing plumbing and sanitation which may hereafter be adopted by the Ohio Public Health Council, be and the same are hereby incorporated in and made a part of these rules and regulations and shall apply to all classes and character of buildings the same as though fully re-written herein.

(B) Private Sewage Disposal Installations:

(a) No private sewage disposal system shall be installed or maintained on any property accessible to a sanitary sewer or where the construction of an accessible sanitary sewer may be obtained through petition of city council by one or more property owners abutting the proposed improvement.

(b) No private sewage disposal system shall be installed until the location and the proposed methods of construction therefore have been approved by the plumbing inspector. The installation and construction of all private sewage disposal systems, equipment, and devices shall conform to the recommendations of the Department of Health of the State of Ohio.

Part II. ADMINISTRATION

Section VI. Plumbing Inspector.

(A) Plumbing Inspector's Appointment: The Board of Health shall appoint, for the purpose of enforcing the rules and regulations as prescribed by said Board, an Inspector of Plumbing at such salary and such terms and conditions as the Board of Health may prescribe.

(B) The inspector so appointed shall not, during his term of office, be engaged or interested in the plumbing business or the sale of any plumbing supplies, nor act as agent directly or indirectly for any person so engaged.

(C) The inspector shall work under the direction and supervision of the Health Commissioner.

(D) Qualifications of Inspector: All inspectors shall pass an examination by the Board of Examiners of Plumbing and shall have had at least ten (10) years practical experience in plumbing.

(E) Before entering upon the duties of plumbing inspector, he shall execute a bond to the City of Mansfield in the sum of One Thousand Dollars ($1,000.00) conditioned for the faithful performance of duties of the office, which bond shall be paid for by the City of Mansfield.

Section VII. Duties of Plumbing Inspector. The duties of the Plumbing Inspector hereinafter designated as the Inspector, shall be as follows:

(A) The examination and approval of plans and specifications.

(B) The issuance of permits.

(C) The collection of fees.

(D) The inspection of plumbing, drainage and sanitation.

(E) Conducting of tests.

(F) The arrest and prosecution of offenders.

(G) Advisory service to the public in matters of plumbing regulations.

(H) Service on complaints.

(I) Reinspection and sanitary maintenance of plumbing.

(J) Act as secretary of the examining board and custodian of records and proceedings of the Board of Examiners.

Section VIII. Permits and Permit Fees.

(A) Issuance of Permits: No plumbing shall be done in the City of Mansfield, except in case of repairs or leaks, without a permit being first issued by the Plumbing Inspector. Applications for permits shall be made by a master plumber, the owner, or by a firm or corporation having a master plumber in its employ and shall be on printed forms to be provided by said Board of Health.

(B) Permit Fees. The fee for a permit and the first fixture or fixture opening shall be fifty cents ($0.50) and an additional charge of twenty-five cents ($0.25) shall be made for each fixture or fixture opening which fees shall be deposited in the General Fund of said City.

(C) In addition to ordinary plumbing, the following are classified as fixtures:

(a) All storm drainage inside of buildings and each opening shall be classed as one (1) fixture.

(b) Every house drain that may hereafter be replaced or re-located.

(c) Each private sewage disposal installation.

(d) All hot water heaters or hot water tanks shall be classed as fixtures.

(e) All fixtures and traps which may hereafter be replaced and/or re-located.

Section IX. Approval of Plans: No such permit shall be issued until suitable plans and specifications in duplicate of the work to be done have been submitted to the Inspector and have been approved by him.

Section X. Record to Be Kept: The Inspector shall keep a record of all plans and specifications submitted to him together with his action thereon, and he shall also make a record of all plumbing in each building installed under these rules and regulations.

Section XI. When Work to Begin: If the work is not done under the approved Plans within six (6) months from the date of approval, such approval shall be deemed to have expired by limitation.

Section XII. Inspections:

(A) The Inspector shall be notified by the plumber or owner when any work is ready for inspection. All parts of every plumbing system shall be made water, air and gas tight. All soil, waste and vent pipes shall be tested with the water test in the presence of the inspector. All plumbing systems when complete shall be tested in the presence of the Inspector to ensure that such system has been installed in a correct and safe manner in accordance with the Laws of the State and the rules and regulations of the Board of Health, and no part of any plumbing system shall be put to any use before final inspection is made unless permission for such use be first granted by the Inspector.

(B) All plumbing work shall be left uncovered and convenient for inspection until examined and approved by the Inspector.

(C) After said plumbing work has been inspected and approved by the Inspector, when requested by the plumber or owner, he shall issue a certificate of approval of same.

Section XIII. Authority to Enter Buildings: The Inspector is hereby empowered with Police Authority to enter any building or dwelling within the City of Mansfield for the purpose of examining, inspecting and testing the plumbing when the Inspector has reason to believe that conditions are detrimental to health, or contrary to the provisions of these rules and regulations and the orders of the Board of Health.

Section XIV. Condemnation of a Building: It shall be the duty of the Plumbing Inspector to place a notice on any building or dwelling within the City of Mansfield where the plumbing is in such condition as to render the same insanitary and unsafe for human habitation or occupancy, and such notice shall not be removed by anyone but the Plumbing Inspector and not by him until laws governing such plumbing have been complied with.

Section XV. Jurisdiction: Plumbing shall be deemed to mean the profession, art or trade of, and all work done and materials used in:

(A) Introducing, maintaining and extending a supply of water through a pipe or pipes or any appurtenances thereof in a building, lot, premises or establishment.

(B) Installing, connecting or repairing any system of drainage whereby foul, waste, rain or surplus water, vapor or fluid is discharged or proposed to be discharged through a pipe or pipes from any building, lot, premises, or establishment into any main public or private sewer, drain, pit, box, filterbed, leaching well, sewage tank or other receptacle on public or private property.

(C) Ventilating any building sewer or fixture or appurtenance connected therewith.

(D) Connecting any building, lot, premises, or establishment with any service pipe, building sewer, water pipe, main, public or private sewer or other underground structure within a distance of three feet of the outer wall of the building.

(E) Performing all classes of work generally done by plumbers.

Section XVI. Reinspection:

(A) Whenever a reinspection is made necessary by the failure of the plumber or owner to have the work ready for inspection when so reported, or by reason of faulty or improper installation he shall pay a fee of five dollars ($5.00) for each such reinspection, such fee to be paid before any reinspection is made.

(B) When plumbing work has been disapproved by the Inspector, said plumbing system shall not be put to any use until it has been altered as prescribed by the Inspector and has received his approval.

Part III.

CERTIFICATES OF COMPETENCY

Section XVII. No person shall in the City of Mansfield engage in the occupation of plumbing until he shall have obtained a certificate of competency so to do from the Board of Health of said City. No person shall engage in the business of plumbing as a master plumber, nor shall any person expose a sign of plumbing or any advertisement pertaining thereto unless he shall have first been duly certified in accordance with the provisions herein set out.

Section XVIII. Examination and Examination Fees:

(A) Master and Journeyman Plumbers: Any person desiring to engage in or work at the trade or occupation of plumbing or to perform any of the work comprehended in this ordinance either as master plumber or journeyman plumber shall make application in writing to the Board of Examiners hereinafter provided for, on a printed form to be furnished by the Board of Health. Such person shall, at such time and place as such Board may designate, undergo such examination as the Board of Examiners may direct as to his qualifications and competency to do such work.

(B) Apprentice Plumber: An Apprentice plumber may work at the trade and occupation of plumbing under the direction or supervision of a certified master plumber or journeyman plumber after he has first filed his name and address and his employer's name and address with the Board of Health. Only one apprentice plumber shall be employed with one master or journeyman plumber.

(C) Examination Fees: Every applicant for examination shall pay an examination fee of $3.00 before he shall be qualified to undergo such examination. No part of such fee shall be refunded on account of failure of the applicant to qualify for such certificate.

Section XIX. Certificate When Issued: After an applicant for a certificate of competency has passed such examination the Board of Examiners shall so certify (and whether as master plumber or journeyman plumber) to the Board of Health. Upon the payment by the applicant to the Board of Health of the fee hereinafter prescribed, said Board shall issue to the said applicant a certificate of competency authorizing him to engage in work at, or follow the trade or occupation of Master Plumber or Journeyman Plumber in said City in the capacity specified in such certificate.

Section XX. Certificate Fees:

(A) Master Plumbers shall pay an original certificate fee of fifty dollars ($50.00) and shall thereafter annually pay a renewal fee of twenty-five dollars ($25.00).

(B) Journeyman Plumbers shall pay an original certificate fee of five dollars ($5.00) and shall thereafter annually pay a renewal fee of three dollars ($3.00).

Section XXI. Renewal of Certificates:

(A) Said certificate of competency shall expire December 31st of each year and shall be subject to renewal on or before that date. Persons failing to renew such certificate of competency, as required above, shall be considered as a new applicant subject to the requirements of obtaining an original certificate of competency.

(B) A person who, at the effective date of this ordinance, holds an unrevoked and unexpired plumber's certificate issued to him by the Board of Health of the City of Mansfield shall be deemed a Master Plumber or a Journeyman Plumber until the 31st day of December next following the effective date of this ordinance, at which time the holder of a certificate of competency based upon an examination may secure a certificate of competency as a Master or Journeyman Plumber upon application therefore being made to the Board of Examiners anytime prior to December 31st next following, and the payment of a fee as provided in this ordinance for annual renewal fees of a Master or Journeyman Plumber.

Section XXII. Board of Examiners:

(A) Members: There is hereby created and established a Board to be known and designated as the Board of Plumbing Examiners. This Board shall consist of four (4) persons appointed by the Board of Health of whom one (1) shall be a Master or Employing Plumber of not less than ten years (10) experience in the business of plumbing, one (1) Journeyman Plumber of like experience, the Health Commissioner, and the Plumbing Inspector, ex officio.

(B) Terms of Office and Qualifications: The term of office of each member shall be two (2) years and shall serve without compensation. All members of this Board shall be citizens and actual residents of the City of Mansfield.

Section XXIII. Powers and Duties:

(A) Organization: Said Board of Examiners shall within thirty (30) days meet and organize by the selection of a chairman. They shall prepare rules for conducting examinations and designate the time and place for the examination of applicants for certificates of competency.

(B) A majority of the members shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business, and it shall require a concurrence of a majority of all members to approve or disapprove of the competency of the applicant.

(C) Said Board shall examine applicants for a Master Plumber's certificate as to their practical and theoretical knowledge of plumbing, house drainage, laws, rules and regulations in relation to plumbing, also as to their ability to lay out plumbing work.

(D) All applicants for Journeyman's certificates shall be examined by said Board as to knowledge of the laws, rules and regulations and also their practical knowledge of, and their mechanical competency in the performance of plumbing work.

(E) Such examination may be made in whole or in part in writing.

Section XXIV. Re-examinations:

Any applicant who fails to pass the examination shall be ineligible for re-examination for a period of thirty (30) days. Should said applicant fail to pass this second examination he shall be ineligible for re-examination for a period of twelve (12) months.

Section XXV. Bond:

Any person desiring to engage in or perform any of the work comprehended in this ordinance as Master Plumber shall furnish, after they have successfully passed the examination hereinabove provided for and before the issuance of the certificate herein provided for, a bond to the approval of said Board of Health and the City Solicitor of the penal sum of One Thousand Dollars ($1,000.00) conditioned to reimburse said City of Mansfield for all actual damage caused by any act or omission by said Master Plumber to any property which the City may own or for which it may be responsible

FORGOT TOOLS

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — (U.P.) — The story about the plumber and his tools is getting better.

C. Lester Ray, of Dothan, Ala., president of the Alabama Master Plumbers' Association, dropped a diamond ring down a drain at the association's convention here.

He couldn't get it out. He called on his fellow plumbers. They could not get it out. They had left all their tools at home.

Temperature - - - - ZERO

Gas, the veteran of so many uses in the home, business and industry, has enlisted in the defense program. "What", you may ask, "has defense to do with cooking the morning eggs or heating water for the Monday washing?" Therein lies an interesting story.

In a normal week more gas is used on Monday morning than at any other time. Besides cooking breakfast, increased gas is used as thousands of water heaters turn up to provide for the week's laundry. The industries, shut down for the weekend, awaken to demand added gas to bring thousands of pieces of heating equipment up to temperature. In the fall or usual winter day, additional gas is used to supply gas furnaces or to take the chill from the room by radiant heaters.

But let's suppose this Monday morning happens to fall on the coldest day of winter, as it easily could. When outside temperatures approach zero, a large majority of the families find that their regular heating plants are inadequate, especially if there is a high wind. Ovens and top burners on kitchen ranges are lighted. Small heaters in other rooms are turned on. Many, many customers who do not regularly heat with gas fall back on this most dependable of fuels.

This is known as a peak day in the gas business. Hundreds of reserve gas wells are turned into the lines. Many idle compressor engines are started. Transmission line pressures are stepped up. Town border and district regulators are opened to permit a greater flow of gas. Emergencies often force the rerouting of gas through different lines.

What happens then to the several thousand industries which also use large quantities of gas? All contracts between our company and its industrial customers provide for reducing or discontinuing service if the gas is needed to maintain service to domestic customers. Seldom has it been necessary to restrict industries in this manner. But this year so many are engaged in fulfilling defense contracts — manufacturing products involving melting, heat treating, forging, baking, roasting or cooking. NO DEFENSE INDUSTRY CAN BE DENIED GAS UNDER ANY CIRCUMSTANCES. Nor can we deny our domestic customers the fine, uninterrupted service to which they are accustomed.

A lot of good engineering and added investments of millions of dollars were needed to solve this problem. Hundreds more wells were drilled or contracted from private owners. Transmission and distribution lines were strengthened for greater capacities — others laid new. Our reserve storage was stepped up. Additional compressors were built at strategic points. By these and other improvements, WE HAVE INCREASED THE AVAILABLE SUPPLY OF GAS TO THE MARKETS BY 33 PERCENT OVER LAST YEAR. Gas has answered the call of defense but still assures you heat for the morning eggs, the Monday washing — yes, in a warm home — on that cold day to come.
